GERMANS ARM AS FRENCH TAKE 4 MORE CITIES

Essen, March 3 (By the Associated Press).—A secret recruiting bureau for the German Reichswehr has been opened at Hagen, just beyond the Ruhr, according to French intelligence officers.

Paris, March 3 (By the Associated Press).—Bavarian troops, notably in the vicinity of Munich, are declared in unconfirmed reports reaching the Foreign Office to have been arming and carrying on infantry target practice.

French Military Headquarters, Mayence, March 3.—(By International News Service)—French troops advanced today along a fifty-mile front in Rhenish Bavaria, Baden and Hesse, occupying additional cities of great strategic importance, including Mannheim and Darmstadt.

French troops entered the great inland port and railway city of Mannheim at 6 o'clock. There were about 500 French infantry and cavalry, supported with machine gun platoons, tanks and armored cars.

Mannheim is forty miles south of Mayence and is the third largest city on the Rhine.

Other French detachments occupied the railway stations in Darmstadt, which is twenty miles southeast of Mayence and only eighteen miles from the frontier of Bavaria.

Moroccan troops crossed the Maxau bridge of Karlsruhe and took possession of the harbor. Others occupied Woerth.

Karlsruhe lies about six miles

SOME OF THAT 'NEAR COAL' YOU'RE BURNING

DEPUTY SEALER JOHN J. MARTIN EXAMINING COAL CARGO

Analysis of recent coal deliveries here shows that many high-priced tons contain 75 per cent. of shale. To end the fleecing of the public, Mayor Curley has delegated a special squad of sealers to test all coal cargoes and prosecute dealers who seek to sell defective fuel to the people as the real thing. Photo shows a deputy carrying out the Mayor's orders.

WILL SEIZE COAL SENT TO RICH

Marblehead Fuel Head to Appropriate Carload Now En Route to Town

Aroused by appeals for fuel made by the suffering residents of Marblehead, John G. Stevens, local fuel administrator, announced today he would seize a carload of anthracite coal en route to that town.

It was also announced that city sealers, appointed by Mayor Curley, will attempt to prevent the sale of shale coal in cars standing in the New Haven yards at Ruggles street, Roxbury. The sealers reported there have been thirty-five convictions in Roxbury alone on charges of selling defective coal.

TAKE COAL FROM RICH.

The coal to be seized in Marblehead, is said to have been ordered by five of the most wealthy citizens of that town. It is to be taken over with the consent of James J. Phelan, State Emergency Fuel Administrator, now basking in the balmy atmosphere of Bermuda.

"I notified Mr. Phelan," said Administrator Stevens, "and he told me to seize the coal as soon as it arrives. It will be distributed in half-ton lots to residents of Marblehead."

The Boston investigation of fireproof coal has been in charge of Deputy Sealers Louis Hertgen. John J. Martin and Thomas A. Kelly. Hertgen said the two cars in Roxbury were the property of the Western Coal Company of No. 1103 Tremont street, Roxbury. Analysis showed 73 per cent. of the coal shale, and the larger part of the remainder ashes and cinders.

BLAMES SPECULATORS.

Governor Cox declared today that wild speculation in coal should be outlawed.

"A Federal standard," he said, "should be established to insure the people that the coal they pay for will be of good quality. I regret that Congress is adjourning without having taken forward-looking action in the coal emergency. The fundamental solution lies in Federal legislation. I still feel, as I said in my

MARANGI CASE GOES TO JURY

Scharton Declines to Put In Defence for Widow of Victim

The cases of Mrs. Theresa Marangi and Ignazio Carluccio, charged with the murder of Leo Marangi, went to the jury in the Superior Court today, after one of the briefest trials on record.

William R. Scharton, counsel for the defendants, who put in no evidence for Mrs. Marangi, on the ground there was no evidence connecting her with the crime, made a stirring appeal for his clients, demanding "liberty or death." He declared Carluccio killed in self-defence.

Assistant District Attorney Maurice Caro, arguing for the government, demanded convictions, declaring "this was just another needless killing." He characterized Carluccio as "a gay Lothario, who sent his Jezebel upstairs while he committed this crime."

Judge Quinn, charging the jury, said:

"The fact that one of these defendants is a soldier and the other a woman should have no bearing on

TRIES SUICIDE WHEN HIS AUTO HITS MAN

New London, Ct., March 3—Dr. J. Dimon, prominent but eccentric physician, ran down a man while motoring in Bank street today. Believing that he had killed the man Dr. Dimon later cut his own throat. His chances for recovery were reported from a hospital as doubtful.

KLAN'S EX-CHIEF SEIZED AS 'SLAVER'

Atlanta, Ga., March 3.—Edward Young Clarke, former Imperial Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, was arrested here today on an indictment issued against him by the Federal grand jury at Houston, Texas, charging violation of the Mann Act. He was released on $1,000 bond.

east of the Rhine. Maxau is on the Rhine and is practically the harbor of Karlsruhe and is in the Karlsruhe fiscal district and about thirty-five miles south of Mannheim.

Today's advance was decided upon to complete French control of German railroads and customs in the Rhineland and as a reprisal against many reported cases of sabotage. The troop movements began at daylight and ended before noon.

The new occupation of German territory affects main line communications between Berlin, Baden and Wurttemberg.

All the railway lines in this zone were taken over by the French and wharves along the Rhine were seized.

German railroad employes at Darmstadt quit work in protest against French occupation of the stations.

Detachments set out from Darmstadt and established military posts along the line to Griesheim.

All today's operations were about 130 miles south of the Ruhr industrial and coal fields.

In the northern zone around the Ruhr the French are imposing heavy fines on German towns in reprisal for sabotage.

The principal railway station in Essen was seized by French troops.

Many Communists Seized by Fascisti

Rome, March 3 (By International News Service).—Wholesale arrests of Italian Communists have been made in northern Italy the last twenty-four hours. At Milan the police raided the office of the Socialist newspaper Avanti, and arrested thirteen members of the Socialist Defence Committee on the charge they were considered an anti-Fascisti organization.

Deport 282 Police From Gelsenkirchen

Dusseldorf, March 3 (By the Associated Press).—French troops, who marched into Gelsenkirchen yesterday and dismissed the socialist police, arrested twelve officers and 270 men of the force and deported them into the interior Germany in motor trucks.

Bavarian "Reds" and Socialists Clash

Berlin, March 3 (By the Associated Press).—A serious collision between Bavarian National Socialists and Communists is reported from Augsburg, thirty-five miles northwest of Munich, says the Central News. Thirty rioters are reported to have been wounded, five seriously.

U. S. ENVOYS TO FIGHT WHITE SLAVERY

New York, March 3.—Dr. Valeria M. Parker and Miss Grace Abbott, of the American Social Hygiene Association, sailed today on the President Harding, en route to Geneva to be unofficial observers at the sessions of the League of Nations committee on traffic in women and children. Their work will be mainly of a missionary nature in an attempt to have foreign nations adopt laws against white slavery that will conform to those in effect in the United States.

ARREST EX-PASTOR IN STOCK SWINDLE

Detroit, March 3.—The Rev. Dr. Brayman W. Anthony, former clergyman and for eleven years president of Adrian College, was arrested here today on a charge of violating the Michigan blue sky law in the sale of alleged worthless stocks. Rev. Anthony, engaged in the real estate business here, is charged by Alex C. Chipman of Plainfield with having sold him $1,500 worth of valueless stock in a food concern.

MISSING GIRL STUDENT FOUND

Cincinnati, March 3.—Helen Sinclair, sixteen years old, of Rochester, N. Y., who left Southern Seminary, Buena Vista, Va., where she was a student, on January 18, saying she was going to Washington, and then vanished, was found today in Covington, Ky., across the Ohio River from Cincinnati. She said she had run away because she wanted to travel and support herself and "learn how things were done."

GANNA GOING WEST IN A FEW DAYS

Chicago, March 3.—Ganna Walska, bride of Harold McCormick, today was said to be preparing to join her husband in California. Madame Walska is expected to leave for the Coast within a few days.

ADVANCE ON FIFTY-MILE FRONT

Today's French operations, an advance on a fifty-mile front across the Rhine, were all about 130 miles south of the Ruhr industrial and coal fields. The great Rhine port of Mannheim, the city of Darmstadt and the port of Karlsruhe, besides the city of Worrth, were occupied.

CREDIT CURES TO 'HEART' ON WALL OF ROOM

Chicago, March 2.—Much attention was centred today on a South Side house where many persons believed they sawan outline of a heart on the wall of a room which had been responsible in some supernatural way for a number of reported cures. Church authorities declared it to be the work of imagination.

"It is a case of over-credulity," said a priest. "There is nothing to be seen there—at least I did not see anything—and I believe it is the result of the imagination of the people."

Father Long, priest of the parish, and Father Novakowski, priest in a nearby parish, both were unable to see anything of the apparition reported to have appeared on the wall of the room where Lillian Daley, a devout girl, had died. It was this outline of the "Sacred Heart," as it was called, that was said to have magically produced cures when ill persons touched it or were touched by some object which had been placed over the spot where it was said the apparition had appeared.

WIN RACE TO SAVE GIRL DEPORTEE

New York, March 3 (By International News Service).—A race to Hoboken with a writ of habeas corpus today saved Leonora Klotz, 19-year-old Polish girl, from deportation. Her uncle, Jacob Klotz, wealthy manufacturer, declares he will spend his fortune, if necessary, to keep her here. Miss Klotz was on board the liner President Harding in custody as a deportee when a process server dashed up with the writ. She was remanded to Ellis Island pending hearing of her case March 11. She was to be deported because the Polish quota for the month of February was exhausted when she arrived.

ASK STATE BOARD AID IN BROCKTON DISPUTE

Brockton, March 3—Arbitration papers have been signed by the cutter's branch of the Boot and Shoe Worker's Union and thirty-eight Brockton shoe manufacturers praying for adjustment by the State Board of Arbitration of the union's request for an advance from $35.83 to $45 a week of forty-eight hours on a five day and a half basis for whole shoe cutters and an increase from $22.25 to $22.50 for fine cutters and $34.38 to $38.20 for clothing lining cutters.

LLOYD GEORGE ASKS LIBERAL REUNION

London, March 3 (By International News Service).—An attempt to wrest the opposition leadership in the House of Commons from the Laborites, was seen today in a proposal by former Premier David Lloyd George for a reunion of the Liberal Party now split with Lloyd George leading one faction and former Premier Asquith the other. The next move is up to Asquith. He is to speak at Cambridge next Wednesday.

inaugural address, that the prices quoted at the mines for coal coming to Massachusetts, are outrageous."

Governor Cox said the proposed conference of New England and New York Governors, to protect the public interests against future coal emergencies, would be of interest as giving an opportunity for New England's voice to be heard.

He thought, however, the most important work now is to protect the public for the remainder of the present emergency.

Benton Asks Quick Action on Coal Gougers

Speedy court action and "no mercy" for coal gyppers was urged by Attorney-General Jay Benton today.

This was the burden of his remarks in opening an extraordinary conference of district attorneys at the State House.

The conference, the first of its kind since Mr. Benton took office in January, was called to consider the short-weight and fire-proof coal situation and to consider measures for checking the same and punishing offenders.

TO DISTRICT ATTORNEYS.

District attorneys or their representatives from all eight districts of the State were present when the conference was called to order in the Attorney-General's office at ten o'clock. Mr. Benton said:

"The past ten days' investigation by my department has revealed many cases of absolute cheating by short-weight coal dealers and sellers of fire-proof coal.

"It has been the poor people who have been imposed upon most. It has been those who could afford to buy only a few hundred pounds of coal at a time.

"They have paid excessive prices, only to find that, when they got the coal into their houses it was absolutely non-combustible.

"Persons guilty of taking advantage of the critical coal situation during this severe Winter should be shown no mercy by the prosecuting authorities.

"I urge the district attorneys to prepare this class of cases as speedily as possible and to put the cases on trial without delay."

MR. BENTON'S COAL BILL.

Mr. Benton and the district-attorneys then discussed laws on short-weighting and fire-proof coal.

The Attorney-General submitted a draft of a bill he has prepared at Governor Cox's request. It will allow the State to confiscate all bad coal found within its borders. It also will remove necessity of proving fraud and deceit in flagrant short-weight or fire-proof coal cases.

Jacob Bitzer, who is in charge of the prosecution of the short-weight and fire-proof coal dealers under the direction of the Attorney-General, told the conference that the services of the State police, the State Commission of Standards, and all the local sealers of weights and measures in the State will be placed at their disposal to help prosecute dealers.

Director Hermann C. Lythgoe of the division of foods and drugs of the State Department of Health, explained how coal is analyzed to detect slag, shale and other foreign material. The district attorneys visited the laboratory and saw first hand an actual analysis of a sample of suspected fire-proof coal.

Present at the conference beside Bitzer and Lythgoe were Attorney-General Benton, Assistant Attorney-General Louis Goldberg, Assistant District Attorney Robert Robinson, representing District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien; District Attorney Arthur K. Reading of Cambridge, Assistant District Attorney Edward T. Murphy of Fall River, District Attorney Charles K. Wright of Pittsfield, District Attorney William G. Clark of Gloucester, District Attorney Thomas J. Hammond of Northampton, District Attorney Harold P. Williams of Brookline and District Attorney Emerson W. Parker of Fitchburg.

Asks Army Trucks to Move Coal

Washington, March 3.—Employment of army trucks and soldiers to move coal from the railroad gateways of Massachusetts to the consuming points within that State so as to relieve the present shortage was suggested to Secretary Weeks today by Representative Dallinger of Massachusetts.

Congressman Dallinger

Mr. Dallinger said the War Secretary had promised to investigate the feasibility of the proposal.

MARANGI CASE GOES TO JURY

the case. Thousands of our population are soldiers and women. The fact they are young and prepossessing should not matter in your decisions either."

Throughout his argument Assistant District Attorney Caro satirized the chivalrous picture of the defendant presented by Attorney Scharton.

NEEDLESS KILLING

"Leo Marangi was shot down in cold blood," he said. "This was just another needless killing, just another broken heart. We must call a halt somewhere. This defendant fired not only a single bullet, but emptied his gun coldly into the reeling body of his victim.

"The time has come for us to forbid mandlin sentiment from obscuring the sane reasoning powers of the jury.

In one of the most stirring addresses ever heard in Suffolk Superior Court, Attorney Sharton told the jury he wanted no compromise verdict.

"We don't want a compromise verdict, gentlemen," the attorney said. "We don't want a verdict of second degree murder, or manslaughter, or assault and battery. I ask you in your verdict to give us liberty or give us death.

"All the evidence in this case points clearly to one thing. Carlucelo killed Marangi in self-defence. He killed a man who invaded his home. The law gives a man a right to do that. That is what I would have done under the circumstances. That, gentlemen, is what any of you would have done.

"The evidence has shown the characters of the two men. Leo Marangi was a gunman, a thief and a character despised even in the underworld. Ignatulo Carlucelo is a hard-working, respectable citizen, with a good record as a husband, as a soldier and as a man.

"It is preposterous to believe, as the government has tried to prove, that Marangi was lured to his death in the flat of Mrs. Marangi. He came armed. He came with a gang. He broke in the door of the flat. Does that seem like the actions of a man lured to an unsuspecting death?

LIKE A SOLDIER.

"Carlucelo stood his ground like a soldier. I am proud of him. He showed courage in facing Marangi. He showed chivalry in getting Mrs. Marangi out of the house and into the home of a neighbor, so that she would be in no danger.

"And the next day he went to work as usual, and gave himself up to the police. Those were not the actions of a murderer.

"Marangi and his gang came to the home of Mrs. Marangi with the intention of killing her and Carlucelo. Before they made the trip they bolstered up their courage with five hours of wine-drinking in Leo Marangi's house.

"Fortified by this false courage they invaded a home, and in that invasion Marangi met his death.

"This is why I ask no compromise verdict, but one which will mean for my clients either liberty or death."

ALLEN SAW NO BLACK TROOPS ON RHINE

New York, March 3.—General H. F. Allen, who commanded the United States troops on the Rhine, said today that he knew of no black troops stationed along the Rhine with the French forces. "I believe they have some soldiers of Arable strain," he says, "but I have seen no negroes."

Some News
His Nose and His Lips
Foolish Advice to Wives
4 Railroad Trusts
—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

THE NEWS of each day is a strange mixture. The negro fighter, Siki, goes to Ireland to fight. That is sending coals to Newcastle.

Kemal Pasha says he wants the absolute independence, territorial, judicial and national of Turkey recognized, and if not, his army is ready. That is the kind of talk the nations understand. They respect Kemal.

AMERICAN SCIENTISTS seek a plant to cultivate in place of the rubber tree that will produce rubber or something as good. That's solid progress.

Cotton goes to a new high price, a good thing for the whole country.

The nation can't be prosperous unless the South is made prosperous by a fair price for cotton.

THE SENATE will investigate the sugar scandal, which made it possible for the speculators, refiners and their official friends to take two hundred and seventy millions out of the public purse, putting the price of sugar higher than it has been since 1920, year of the alleged "sugar famine." The Senate probably won't do anything. It ought to find the man in the Department of Commerce responsible for the statement that started the extortion.

Once found, that individual, big or little, should go to jail.

He will probably go to Europe instead with plenty of money to spend when he gets there.

THE KRUPPS have rented coal fields in Russia, where they had already secured two hundred thousand acres for wheat raising. Other German magnates have made a loan of ten million pounds in England to finance coal buying there. Modern business is resourceful.

IN GERMAN cities of the Ruhr, destruction of property or interference with the French, will be punished with heavy fines.

This is called unjust, because a majority of the citizens fined have nothing to do with the sabotage.

But consider how gentle conquerors are now. You remember how William the Conqueror took the leading citizens of a captured city, skinned them alive and hung their skins on the city walls, because they had spoken slightingly of his mother, humble daughter of a tanner.

AND REMEMBER the great Cyrus, who casually says of a conquered King: "I cut off his nose and his lips and chained him at my door." To have your royal enemy, with festering face, chained where you could conveniently kick him as you went out, seemed righteous that day. The French wouldn't do that even to the former Kaiser, although they doubtless would guillotine him if they could get him. The world improves.

A LEGAL AID society kindly gives silly advice to wives. They are told, "Don't spend too much time with your mothers." That's foolish and against public interest.

The woman who respects her mother will have respect from her own children. The woman that neglects her mother will be neglected by her children and deserve it.

THIS UNWISE legal society tells wives they must not interfere with the husband when he chooses to chastise the children—that is his right.

The race is gradually becoming civilized, because the mothers have interfered with child beating by the husband. Many a father has been killed by his son, as told in the old Scotch ballad, because chastising went too far. Mothers protecting children from brutality have helped to civilize the men.

ROMAN FATHERS had the right to kill their own children, and doubtless the Legal Aid Society of that day would have told the wives not to interfere with that sacred right.

M. A—— G——, living at Troyes, has long suffered from enteritis, for which different treatments have been tried in vain. He is also in a very bad state mentally, being depressed, gloomy, unsociable and obsessed by thoughts of suicide. Preliminary experiments easy, followed by suggestion, which produces an appreciable result from the very day.

For three months, daily suggestions to begin with, then at increasingly longer intervals. At the end of this time the cure is complete, the enteritis has disappeared, and his morals have become excellent. As the cure dates back twelve years without the shadow of a relapse, it may be considered as permanent. M. G—— is a striking example of the effects that can be produced by suggestion, or rather by autosuggestion.

At the same time as I made suggestions to him from the physical point of view, I also did so from the mental, and he accepted both suggestions equally well. Every day his confidence in himself increased, and as he was an excellent workman, in order to earn more, he looked out for a machine which would enable him to work at home for his employer. A little later a factory owner, having seen with his own eyes what a good workman he was, entrusted him with the very machine he desired. Thanks to his skill, he was able to turn out much more than an ordinary workman, and his employer, delighted with the result, gave him another and yet another machine, until M. G——, who, but for suggestion, would have remained an ordinary workman, is now in charge of six machines which bring him a very handsome profit.

Mme. D——, at Troyes, about 30 years of age. She is in the last stages of consumption, and grows thinner daily in spite of special nourishment. She suffers from coughing and spitting, and has difficulty in breathing; in fact, from all appearances she has only a few months to live.

Preliminary experiments show great sensitiveness, and suggestion is followed by immediate improvement. From the next day the morbid symptoms begin to lessen. Every day the improvement becomes more marked, the patient rapidly puts on flesh, although she no longer takes special nourishment. In a few months the cure is apparently complete. This person wrote to me on the 1st of January, 1911, that is to say eight months after I had left Troyes, to thank me and to tell me that she was perfectly well.

8 SHOT, 3 DEAD IN HOOTCH WAR

Dogs Help Solve Schneider Murder

3 KILLED IN RUM BATTLE

Five Shot in Clash in Tennessee, Every Man Being Slain or Wounded

Knoxville, Tenn., March 3.—Three rum-runners were shot to death and five wounded in a pistol fight with Federal officers near Jellico.

W. S. Jaynes, probition agent and leader of the posse, closed in on the men, who apparently yielded to the command to surrender and then flashed their guns.

The dead:

Morrison Ayers, alleged leader of the gang.

George Perkins and his brother, Walter Perkins.

The wounded:

W. S. Jaynes, Federal prohibition agent, shot three times, may recover; George W. Heatherly, city marshal of Jellico, shot through neck and shoulder, may die; Jeff Covel, deputy sheriff, shot through abdomen, may die; M. Perry, deputy sheriff, slightly wounded.

An unidentified man, a member of the liquor party, was wounded. He escaped after all other participants were down.

The battle took place in a mountain gap, known as "No Business," through which the liquor men had to pass in order to reach this city. Every member of both sides were either killed or wounded.

Deputy Sheriff Perry managed to spread the alarm and soon hundreds of citizens were coming from all directions to aid the officers.

'LOVAIRS' QUARREL, SAYS POLA

She and "Sharlie" Now Have a Better and More Thorough Understanding

Los Angeles, March 3.—"It was just a lovairs' leetle quarrel. Everything is fine now. We have made up after a better and more thorough understanding. Our engagement stands."

Such was the statement of Pola Negri, film tragedienne, in admitting her engagement to Charlie Chaplin, the comedian, was restored after she had announced she had given Charlie his freedom. She continued:

"There is veree leetle I can say. "In our case, as with all great artists, we have our moods.

HAPPENED OVER TELEPHONE.

"It all happened over the telephone. Just a leetle misunderstanding on both our parts.

"For three days and nights, I have not sleep for thinking of thees things.

"Everything has all been—you call eet 'patched up'—now and I am —we are—so happy."

She smiled her joy, and said:

"I am pleased that Sharlie came over today and everything between us has been adjusted. We are even more in love now than ever—if that is possible."

She was asked:

"When will the wedding take place?"

"That ees something I cannot say now. Perhaps a long, long time off yet; still it may be any time, possibly verree soon. It all depends on our moods."

CHARLIE EXPLAINS IT ALL.

At that hour Miss Negri was making her announcement, Charlie Chaplin was just about to leave her home after a visit of more than an hour.

"Three days ago we had a little misunderstanding. It was over a telephone conversation. Just a little lovers' quarrel, that's all, nothing more. She felt there was something wrong, or whatever you might call it. Anyway, we had a tiff.

"We didn't see each other all that day or the next day either. Nor the third day. It didn't amount to anything. As far as I am concerned there has been a reconciliation."

DETECTIVES RE-ENACT TRAGEDY

Time Element Proves New Important Factor in Death of Rich Contractor

By International News Service

New York, March 3.—Sulu and Hulu, twin Chow dogs, will today act as jury in the investigation of the murder of Frederick Schneider, their master.

Their barks or their silence will indicate to the Bronx district attorney and his aides whether the wealthy contractor was slain by one of his intimates, presumably a woman, or by a comparative stranger.

Their actions will be observed minutely by a corps of detectives working on the case when the murder scene is re-enacted at the exact spot on Lonely Sound View avenue where Schneider was shot to death, it was announced.

Mrs. Anna Buzzi.

The dogs will be taken in the same car at the same time to this place.

WILL RE-ENACT TRAGEDY.

Again two shots will break the evening stillness, this time fired into the air.

Prosecutor Glennon believes firmly that the dogs will bark.

They did not bark the day Schneider was killed—or the farmer who saw the car pass immediately before the crime would have heard them.

The prosecutor thinks the murderer was some one who knew the contractor well—very well. So well that the dogs (Chows are known to be hostile to strangers) accepted this person and were not aroused.

And when the shots that killed Schneider were fired they still did not bark.

TIME FACTOR IN CASE.

Testimony submitted to prosecutor Glennon by one of the policemen who went to Schneider's apartments immediately after the body was found indicates that the clock there was seven minutes fast.

Mrs. Anna Buzzi, held as a material witness, told this policeman that Schneider had returned to their home at five o'clock, but the time, according to this new development, could have been only 4:53 p. m.

The District Attorney attaches great importance to this discovery, since it adds seven minutes to the time between the moment Schneider left home and the moment he was killed.

U. S. TO IGNORE CURZON NOTE ON CONSUL

Washington, March 3. (By International News Service)—The dispute between Great Britain and the United States over the closing of the American consulate at Newcastle appears likely to go down in the category of unadjusted international incidents.

Great Britain's communication, written by Viscount Curzon, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and savoring of sharpness, was received at the State Department today and probably will not be answered, according to administration officials.

Lord Curzon disputes the statement that the American government had officially advised the British government of the results of investigations of the case.

In the face of this assertion, administration spokesmen today declared the United States had made the investigation claimed and, furthermore, had informed the British government of the results thereof.

The American consulate at Newcastle "has been closed and it will remain closed," said an administration official.

COUNTESS SAYS MISS RAMSEY WRONGS MEN

New York, March 3.—European men are not gold diggers, and Grace Ramsey of Somerville, Mass., made a great error when she said so, asserts the Countess De La Mare Hambique, known on the stage as Martini Cecil, who arrived from Havre on the Chicago. The countess said:

Grace Ramsey

"There are no men in the world to measure up to the elbow of a Frenchman. I am engaged to an American professor, and yet I cannot let Miss Ramsey's statement go.

"European men are very gallant. It is merely a matter of understanding them. As a matter of fact, the European pays a compliment to a pretty woman in conversation and often says he would like to marry her. This doesn't mean they'd really like to.

"I don't see anything in what Miss Ramsey said about European men trying to find out how much money American girls have and then trying to marry them.

"Europeans are not the only men with polygiot ideas."

"Poly what?"

"I mean polygamous ideas."

The Countess talked about men and women of different ages marrying and then spoke of Isadora Duncan as one who followed a caprice.

OVERTON'S BODY BROUGHT HOME

New York, March 3.—The body of Lieutenant John W. Overton, famous Yale runner, who fell in June, 1918, while the marines were taking Belleau Wood, was brought back from France on the George Washington today for burial at his home, in Nashville, Tenn.

Rome—Premier Mussolini has no prejudices against women. He admits their right to participate in the civil and political life of the country, but does not believe the time is ripe for granting them suffrage.

SEE RECORD YEAR IN U. S. CUSTOMS TOTAL

Washington, March 3.—Customs receipts of about $525,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, appeared certain today in the view of treasury officials, who based the new estimate of a record total for the year on customs collections of $48,311,000 for February. In the first eight months of the current fiscal year the collections totaled $343,581,382.

In addition to predicting that imports will increase during the next few months, some officials asserted that the receipts would be proportionally greater than they were in the earlier months of the application of the new tariff law, which went into effect last September 22.

RESCUE BOAT DRIFTS FAR FROM PRO PATRIA

Halifax, N. S., March 3—The Canadian ice breaker Stanley, which set out Wednesday to aid the steamer Pro Patria, caught in the ice eighty miles from St. Pierre, was in the grip of an ice field off the Cape Breton coast today and drifting away from her objective at the rate of a mile an hour, she reported by radio.

The Pro Patria is thought to be in a serious predicament, having sent out distress calls by wireless a week ago today stating she was short of fresh water. She sailed from Halifax, N. S., for St. Pierre February 26, with ten passengers and mail.

JOHN D., JR., ESCAPES TAX ON TAPESTRIES

Washington, March 3. (By International News Service)—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will not be required by the Treasury Department to pay taxes or duty on his purchase of the famous Rochefoucald tapestries, it was said by Treasury officials today. Even if the sale of his six panels, depicting "The Hunt of the Unicorn," were actually sold to Rockefeller within the United States, there is no law by which Rockefeller can be forced to pay taxes, it was stated.

ALFONSO NAILS TALE OF HIS ABDICATION

Madrid, March 3 (By Associated Press).—King Alfonso, in a striking speech at the inauguration of the new Library of Fine Arts today, gave definite denial to the rumors of the possibility of his abdication. After a speech by the director of fine arts, in which he announced the approaching foundations of a new art school, the King said:

"It will give me much pleasure to lay the foundation stone of this new school and, if possible, also the last stone. I say this because of the recent rumor that I was about to abdicate. I am not a deserter."

GARY BUYS INTEREST IN ITALIAN PROJECT

PARTY LINE HOGS TO LOSE TELEPHONES

graph Company, it was announced today.

Hereafter constant offenders against the telephone company rule limiting conversations to five minutes, will be deprived of their telephones.

For years the company has requested party line subscribers to limit the duration of their conversation in courtesy to others, without any apparent success.

Today, enclosed with the February bills, were sent out notices to subscribers to the effect that failure to conform to the five-minute regulation hereafter would result in drastic action.

This was confirmed by H. H. Carter, division commercial superintendent of the Metropolitan Division, who said:

"We expect and hope that the people will cooperate with us in limiting conversation to five minutes. We hope they will agree with us that it is absolutely necessary. However, if we cannot get them to realize the necessity, we will simply have to go ahead and stop the service. That seems to be the only way out of it."

A protest against the fee of $2.50 charged telephone users for reconnecting the service, which has been disconnected by the company has been lodged with the State Department of Public Utilities by I. H. Marcus of No. 50 Pearl street. Mr. Marcus protested that the company removes the service because of the temporary delinquency of patrons in paying bills and then imposes an outrageously high fee for installing the service again.

He said that none of the other public service corporations, such as the gas and electric, impose any such charge for restoring service.

Company officials said the cost of reinstating often amounts the fee charged.

WIFE DEMANDS MORE ALIMONY OF GALLAGHER

New York, March 3.—Gallagher and Shean, victorious in the legal fight started by the Shuberts to bring them back into the Leejaktan fold, held a gorgeous celebration today.

Mr. Gallagher was the principal speaker. In the midst of his address word came to him that his wife, Mrs. Helen T. Gallagher, asked leave in the Superior Court to increase her demand for alimony from $300 to $600 a week.

It developed that during the trial of the Shubert action Mrs. Gallagher occupied a seat next to Hilda Moreno, Spanish beauty of the Follies, who is co-respondent in Mrs. Gallagher's suit.

That, plus the high eulogies of her husband delivered by Morris Gest, William A. Brady and others, convinced Mrs. Gallagher she had been far too modest in her alimony demands.

COUZENS LEADS FIGHT AGAINST J. G. McNARY

Washington, March 3.—The contested nomination of James G. McNary of New Mexico, to be Comptroller of the Currency, was reported favorably today by the Senate Banking Committee.

James G. McNary

A minority report, said to criticize severely Mr. McNary's administration as president of the El Paso First National Bank was prepared by Senators Couzens, Republican, Michigan, and Hitchcock, Democrat, Nebraska.

Excessive loans by the bank to Mr. McNary and other bank officers, "speculative" banking, especially in Mexican currency, and payment of large dividends without reducing doubtful loans, were among the allegations, it is stated.

IRISH REPUBLICAN LEADER CAPTURED

Dublin, March 3.—James Keena, commanding the irregular forces near Clare, was captured by Free Staters today.

ASKS STATE DEPT. TO PROBE DESECRATION

Commander Eugene Driscoll of George Dilboy Post, V. F. W., of Somerville, announced today receipt of a telegram from Senator David I. Walsh, stating he had asked the Secretary of State to investigate the desecration of the remains of Private George Dilboy, Somerville war hero. Dilboy, a member of the 103rd Infantry, died from wounds received at Belleau Wood. His body was interred in the Greek village of Anasata, where his father lived. In the Graeco-Turkish war, Turkish soldiers broke open the casket and scattered the bones of the dead soldier.

BERGERON BACK ON POLICE FORCE TODAY

Patrolman George F. Bergeron of the Jamaica Plain station, who was a prominent witness in the investigation of the Boston office of the Veterans' Bureau and was later suspended, returned to duty today at Station 7, East Boston, where he has been transferred.

SIGNS MONTANA'S ANTI-JAPANESE BILL

Helena, Mont., March 3.—Governor J. M. Dickson today signed the "Anti-Japanese Bill," prohibiting owning or leasing of land in Montana by aliens.

COURT DECIDES BEN WAS NOT HUSBAND

King Solomon had nothing on Judge Abbott of Waltham Court today.

All Solomon had to do was to decide the maternity of a baby. But Judge Abbott was called on to decide for Mrs. Flora Pataglio of No. 2 Spring street, Watertown—who was not quite sure for herself—whether Benjamin Pappa of No. 84 Prince street, Boston West End, was or was not her missing husband, Peter Pataglio.

Judge Abbott decided Benjamin was not Peter. For this decision Benjamin was truly thankful.

Benjamin was strolling Washington street when a stranger grabbed him. The stranger was Mrs. Flora Pataglio's brother-in-law. He informed the staggered Pappa:

BEN IS PINCHED.

"You are Peter Pataglio who deserted my sister-in-law Flora in 1918 and took $1,500. You need to run a bowling alley in Medford."

"You're a liar," howled Benjamin, "I am Benjamin Pappa and I live on Prince street and I have a wife and two children."

Benjamin was arrested for non-support and bigamy. Officer Hanover street police station Flora was sure Benjamin was her missing Peter. They took him to the Watertown police station for the night. Flora, who followed, was not so sure by that time. So they had Benjamin in Waltham court today.

Benjamin had had time to get some powerful witnesses. His mother testified he was her son, Benjamin. His sister swore to the identity of her own brother. Benjamin explained his 20-year residence in Boston and six in Prince street. He rested his case.

MUST HAVE SHRUNK.

Judge Abbott had Flora and Ben stand up.

"Is that your husband?"

Flora—"Well, it looks like him."

The brother-in-law who started the trouble was sure. But another brother-in-law, Tony Arigo, court interpreter, said: "It does look like Peter but if it is him, he has shrunk a lot."

Inspector James Burke of Watertown, who knew the missing Peter, said flatly it was a mistake in identity. So Benjamin was freed.

TIE TRUCK DRIVER TO TREE; GET $20,000

By International News Service.

Hackensack, N. Y., March 3.—Theft of a $20,000 silk shipment by armed bandits who held up a motor truck en-route from Philadelphia to New York city became known today when John Kiss, driver of the auto, was found tied to a tree at the side of the Paterson Plank road near Lodi, N. J.

SENATORS TO PROBE GOLD, SILVER, TRADES

Washington, March 3.—An investigation during the recess of Congress into the gold and silver industry was ordered today by the Senate. A commission of five was created to conduct the inquiry.

PHONOGRAPH RECORDS FOR HONEYCOMBS

The small ten-cent disk phonograph records make ideal forms for winding honeycomb coils, O. G. Cafrella, of Medford, wrinkles in.

The composition is dielectric and will not absorb moisture, like cardboard, and thus lose its insulating qualities.

Cut about nine radial slits equidistant apart up as far as the paper on which the title of the record is printed. Make the slits one-thirty-second of an inch wide. This makes a form on which the required amount of wire may be wound in and out of the slits, basket-wise. The hole makes a convenient place for mounting the coil.

Three coils, wound with 30 turns for the primary, 80 turns for the secondary, and 50 turns for the tickler, make an excellent receptive set. The primary and secondary may be tapped.

DENISHAWN DANCERS GOOD ENTERTAINERS

Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, with their assisting corps, gave a delightful afternoon's good entertainment at the Boston Opera House to an audience that almost filled the theatre. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed, making the repetition of several numbers necessary.

Several of the dances which were not presented on their previous visit of this season, proved to be more than usually interesting. Of these, the Vale Directoire, by Ted Shawn and Lenore Scheffer; the Spear Dance, by Ted Shawn, and the Dance of the Black and Gold Sari, by Ruth St. Denis, were the most conspicuous.

BEER KEPT HIS ARMY CONTENT, SAYS ALLEN

New York, March 3.—Modified prohibition—allowing the troops light wines and beer—was most effective in maintaining discipline in the American occupational army in Germany, Major-General Henry T. Allen, commander, declared when he arrived home today on the George Washington.

The German residents of the American zone of occupation, he said, had been greatly pleased with the conduct of the Americans.

Personally, General Allen said, he was a "near teetotaler," having taken no liquor of any kind "for years," but he could not see that the lesser intoxicants had done his men any harm.

With General Allen were two more Henry T. Allens—his son, a captain of cavalry, and his grandson, born on the Rhine, fifteen months ago to Captain Allen's French wife—a score of staff officers and fifty-four casual enlisted men.

General Allen said the army of occupation had proved to be one of the greatest army training centres the United States ever had and described the force he commanded there as "the finest soldiers in the world."

Speaking of complaints of Americans because Germany had not yet paid for the maintenance of the American troops on the Rhine, he pointed out that the $250,000,000 that the army upkeep cost was but eighteen per cent. in excess of what it would have cost to keep the troops in American. The prestige America had gained from its army of occupation, he said, was well worth the extra eighteen per cent. if Germany never paid.

Baby Girl Is Born in Office of Car Barn in West Lynn

A baby girl was born to Captain and Mrs. Joseph E. Noyes of Jamaica Plain today in the West Lynn car barn.

Captain and Mrs. Noyes were on their way to the hospital when the stork decided he had gone far enough. A dash was made for the little office of the car barn.

Dr. Stephen R. Davis of Lynn was called, and the mother was immediately removed to the Winthrop Post Hospital.

Conductor Walter Hiller, who acted as nurse, sent forth the glad tidings that it was a girl.

Captain Noyes is attached to the Army Base, South Boston.

BELIEVE 11 DEAD IN MINE BLAST

Blue Field, W. Va., March 3.—Rescue parties today again entered the mine of the Wyoming Coal and Coke Company, at Arista, Mercer County, to search in its blast-torn passages for five miners entombed nearly twenty-four hours after the terrific explosion of yesterday.

It was expected the death list would be definitely fixed at eleven, as nine company officials held out little hope that the five men still entombed were alive. Six bodies already have been recovered. Twenty-seven other workers, trapped when the walls of the mine crumbled, were saved by rescuers. They were only slightly injured.

The explosion was caused by an overcharge of dynamite used in blasting, according to W. A. Craven, mine superintendent.

SMALL BILLS GO THROUGH AS CONGRESS ENDS

Washington, March 3.—Appropriations of the present session of Congress aggregated $5,939,869,026.80, according to Senator Overman. He said this was an increase of $264,800,000 over those for the present fiscal year and that in the last preceding year, 1915, the total was $1,107,000,000.

Washington, March 3.—Its major tasks all but completed, the Sixty-Seventh Congress found time in its closing hours today to take up many of the lesser bills and resolutions such as usually are rushed amid the hurry and confusion of a session's final wind-up.

From the opening of the last day's work in both Senate and House discussion of legislative "chickenfeed" was the order of business with many members seeking, and in many cases finding, an opportunity to get a vote on this or that private or local measure which they never heretofore had hoped to bring to the stage of action.

The only bill of first magnitude to which attention had to be given during the last hours was the Farm Credits measure, as finally agreed to last night by Senate and House conferees. Acceptance of the conference report by the Senate and House themselves was more or less of a formality.

Late night sessions were expected in both Senate and House with a view to clearing the decks and leaving only routine matters for the meeting tomorrow preceding the final fall of the gavels Sunday noon.

Dozens of bills and hundreds of measures remained today in the legislative hopper, but most of the 14,000 on the calendars were doomed, their passage being the only efforts at resuscitation planned.

Cheek to Cheek and Shimmy Dancing Barred to Pupils

Hackensack, N. J., March 3.—Rules for the students at school dances have been drawn up by members of the high school faculty here.

Dancers must face each other with only hands and arms touching. The rules forbid:

Long or short steps.
Fast or slow dancing.
All exaggerated movements of the body.

6 GIANT PLANES IN PORTO RICO-TEXAS FLIGHT

San Antonio, Tex., March 3.—Six giant De Havilland planes, carrying twelve officers of the air service, took off at Kelly Field shortly after 8 o'clock today on a flight to Porto Rico.

After circling over the field in close formation they headed due south and turned toward Houston. They were flying in a twelve-mile east wind.

The trip, for purposes of carrying out the problem proposed, will be considered to have begun only when the planes leave Arcadia, Fla.

Returning to the United States, the planes will follow the same route until they have reached Arcadia. From there they will proceed to Jacksonville, thence to Fort Bragg and Fayetteville, N. C., to Bolling Field, Washington.

THREE SHOT IN BATTLE WITH CRAZED VET

Cleveland, March 3.—Efforts of more than a score of policemen to dislodge John Weltzel, World War veteran, who, laboring under the delusion that murderers are after him, barricaded himself in a room, were successful today, after every tear bomb in the city had been thrown into the house.

Weltzel crazed by a flareback of a nervous disorder from a shell concussion, fired at everyone who approached the house. His brother Herbert and two policemen were slightly wounded.

The trouble started while Weltzel was seated in the parlor of his home. He was nervous and repeatedly pleaded with his mother and sister to "come upstairs where the murderers can't get us."

"There's one of them now," he screamed as Herbert, unsuspectingly opened the door on his return home. With that the crazed man shot, the bullet inflicting a grazing wound in Herbert's cheek. Herbert summoned the police. When they arrived Weltzel began shooting at them.

Reinforcements were called and the "tear-bomb" attack launched. It ended in Weltzel's arrest.

300 PANIC STRICKEN BY N. Y. EXPLOSION

New York, March 3.—Three hundred persons living in the nine-story apartment house at No. 452 Riverside Drive were panic stricken by an explosion that shook the entire building. Women ran through the halls with babies in their arms, small children holding to their skirts. Investigation disclosed a fifty-gallon hot water boiler in the cellar had exploded, damaging the basement but injuring no one.

ESSEX WINS BY REDUCING PRICES

That lowered prices and improved service will win the approval of the traveling public and justify themselves by increased patronage is proved in the case of the Hotel Essex. This hotel, one of the largest in Boston, attracted national attention when, at the beginning of the year, it announced a substantial reduction in rates, applicable both to rooms and to the hotel restaurants. At the same time, various improvements in service were instituted.

Scarcely more than two months have elapsed since the announcement was made, yet according to Manager McCarthy, the reopening already has exceeded the fondest expectation of the management and the Hotel Essex is now enjoying the best patronage in its history.

The aim of the management of Hotel Essex is to provide a type of service which will make every guest feel that every employe of the hotel, from the porter who handles the luggage up through the rank to the manager, is personally interested in making his stay at Hotel Essex a pleasurable event.

The development of this spirit of service is a hobby with Manager McCarthy, who has so successfully instilled into the entire operating staff of the hotel that hundreds of guests have personally congratulated him upon the friendly atmosphere which permeates the hotel, and the cheerful, courteous attention rendered by the employes.

The traveling public, especially the commercial man, is quick to sense the real spirit of a hotel. As a result the fame of Hotel Essex is being spread throughout the nation, and commercial travelers are passing out the tip to brother travelers working Essex. "When in Boston, go to the Hotel Essex." This good will is rated by Manager McCarthy as the best evidence that his innovations and improvements in service are "registering" favorably with his guests.

OVER MILLION GAIN IN CONTRACT AWARDS

Building operations throughout New England continue to show substantial increase over 1922, according to statistics of building and engineering operations compiled by F. W. Dodge Company. Contracts awarded during the week ending February 27 amounted to $2,323,700, an increase of $1,367,500 over the corresponding period in 1922, and over $633,700 than in 1921, the largest previous period in the twenty-three years for which figures are available.

Totals for the past week and in previous years are:

SNOW RAISES ICE HARVEST COSTS

The unusually heavy snowfall this Winter has increased the cost of harvesting ice as much as 50 per cent. over that of last year, declares C. H. Voter, secretary of the Boston Ice Dealers' Association. Some of the dealers have been hit more seriously than others, but in practically all instances the snow will have put a serious dent in the dealers' profits. It has not been the extraordinary total snowfall so much as the frequency of the storms which has caused the greatest trouble, Mr. Voter states. Many dealers have cleared away the snow and were ready to begin harvesting—in some instances had already begun to cut—when additional snow made it necessary to begin all over. This has happened, not once or twice, but many times during the Winter. Then, too, the improved conditions of general business have made it difficult to obtain men who would endure the bitter cold and fatiguing effort of ice harvesting. Higher wages had to be paid. But even at the higher wages offered it has been difficult, asserts Mr. Voter, to keep forces recruited to full strength, owing to loss of time occasioned by the frequent snows.

The Associated Ice Dealers of Massachusetts will gather in Boston for their annual convention on April 5 and 6, and at that time ways and means will be considered for overcoming, in future, such difficulties as have been encountered this Winter.

RAISE IN TIRE PRICES EXPECTED

An increase in the price of automobile tires is looked for during the coming week, according to S. L. Barrabee & Co. of No. 133 Columbus avenue, New England agents for Miller tires and tubes. The rising cost of cotton and the increased price of rubber, due to the restrictions upon crude rubber production put into effect by the British government, have made higher prices for tires inevitable.

A rush by motorists to acquire tires in anticipation of the increase is expected to move the stock from the tire dealers' racks faster than usually otherwise happen, particularly in view of the bad driving conditions that still exist.

The congestion of railroad facilities, with the consequent heavier service given motor trucks by the large industrial users, has had the effect of increasing considerably the demand for truck tires. The splendid service rendered by Miller heavy duty pneumatic tires and pneumatic-balloon cord tires, has caused a number of large concerns to make Miller tires standard equipment for their trucks, declares Mr. Barrabee.

Auto accessories have been moving very well, especially in view of the number of cars laid up on account of the heavy snows. Barrabee & Co. attribute this to the fact that many motorists have taken advantage of the opportunity to overhaul their cars and install new equipment in anticipation of Spring weather.

Mandarin Coat Vogue Popular Among Hub Smart Set, Says Betty Alden

MRS. FRANCIS W. PEABODY

Mrs. Francis W. Peabody of Brimmer street is of the matrons interested in the work of the Community Health Association. A benefit performance of "The Fool" will be given on March 12 to aid the association.

(Photo by Marcus.)

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE Countess—known in full as the Comtesse Francois de Bremond d'Arle—has really the most dee-lightful of accents.

But most of the time there wasn't any accent, for the simple reason that a great, great deal of French was "parlaied." Oh! yes, everyone flourished their "francais," and when a whole roomful of people do that—n'est-ce-pas?

It all happened yesterday at Mrs. Horace Binney's home on Commonwealth avenue, where the Countess was holding a sale of all kinds of rare and exquisite articles made by French women left in need by the war.

There were some soft filmy affairs of delicate blue, rose and orchid chiffon, which Milady may wear either as a tea-gown or a summer frock. There was one stunning black and gold Mandarin coat. And speaking of the latter reminds me that not a few of the smart matrons have adopted the vogue of donning these Mandarin coats either for evening wear or as sort of an informal house jacket. It all depends, of course, upon the gorgeousness of the coat, the more simple ones being used for wear about the house.

But to go on with the sale. There were some really exquisite combs, pendants and bracelets of Cabochon enamel, the latter being quite rare. The dainty little children's dresses also on sale breathed of the skill of infinitely careful, clever fingers.

And I musn't forget the gay splashes of color which the fancy dress costumes—made of paper—brought into the room. Nor the contrast afforded by the sombre richness of a piece of black velvet, hand-painted in gold, waiting to be "made up" into anything the purchaser might desire.

I understand that the Countess made no end of a success of her sale and exhibition, which is to benefit the French women who made the articles sold. And this, despite the fact that the little price tags lying beside each piece told rather a staggering tale. But no one seemed to mind that, and the articles were really very beautiful.

As for the Countess herself. She's a most attractive looking woman, without being even the least bit extraordinary. Just awfully nice looking, with dark brown hair done simply and becomingly. At present she is the house-guest of Mrs. I. Tucker Burr of Marlboro street.

MRS. WILLIAM STANLEY PARKER, who now and then delights society with monologues which she presents with all the adroitness of her Peggy Porter days, is chairmaning the benefit performance of "The Fool," which, through the courtesy of Channing Pollock, will be given on Monday evening, March 12, at the Selwyn Theatre. A number of society folk are sponsoring this performance in order to aid the Community Health Association in its campaign for $235,000.

Mrs. Francis Gray, the popular president of the Junior League, is in charge of the group of "leaguers" who will act as ushers and flower vendors. Among the matrons who are helping the one-time Peggy Porter is Mrs. Francis W. Peabody of Brimmer street. Others associated with her include Mesdames Carl T. Keller, Robert L. DeNormandie, L. Cushing Goodhue, John L. Grandin, Jr., N. Penrose Hallowell, Philip S. Dalton and Frank H. Monks.

Practically all the matrons of this group are making plans for dinner and theatre parties in connection with this benefit presentation.

bines brutality, anger and cowardice, and it is the mother's duty to interfere.

A GREAT RAILROAD merger will probably go through, uniting the Western railroads into four big systems, each with about thirty thousand miles of tracks.

The merger needed is a merger of all the railroads of the country, under ownership of the government, and taken out of politics—the kind of politics that tries to build up individual popularity by squandering the people's money, and the other kind of politics that tries to build up private fortunes by exploiting the people's property.

THE COMBINATION planned in the West will make exploitation of the people more convenient and profitable, eliminating even the pretense of competition. The right kind of merger under government control, considering first, public service, second, good pay for employes, and last, profits, would solve the railroad problem. That problem has outgrown private management and private pocketbooks. And the private owners privately admit it.

A. C. SMITH OF OMAHA, DEAD; WED HUB GIRL

Omaha, Neb., March 3.—Arthur Cristenden Smith, sixty years old, chairman of the board of directors of M. E. Smith & Company of Omaha, died of pneumonia here today. Mr. Smith was born at Cincinnatus, N. Y., in 1863, and graduated from Harvard in 1887. He married Miss Harriet White of a prominent Boston family, who with five children, survives him.

MAY TAKE SHOE ROW TO STATE BOARD

Haverhill, March 3.—The Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' Association is unsuccessful in pressing their demands for Saturday morning work with the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, will petition the State commissioner of labor and industries that Haverhill's turn shoe business be declared seasonal and that their factories be allowed to run in excess of the prescribed nine hours a day.

MAY HOLD BANKER ON MURDER CHARGE

Philadelphia, March 3 (By International News Service).—Henry C. Brock, banker, society man and clubman, released in $15,000 bail in connection with the running down and killing of three persons by his motor car, may be re-arrested on a charge of second degree murder. Brock is already charged with homicide, passing a standing trolley car and failing to stop after hitting a pedestrian.

SAVINGS BRANCH TO GET ALL INCOME

All money collected from stockholders and directors of the Prudential, Cosmopolitan and Hanover Trust Companies must be credited to the savings, instead of commercial departments, until all savings depositors are paid in full and with interest from the date the bank commissioner took charge, the full bench of the Supreme Court ruled today, in answer to interrogatories filed by Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen.

LIGHTNIN' BILL IS QUAINTLY HUMAN

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

WINCHELL SMITH stepped off a train at the South Station the other afternoon, waved a long, expressive finger at the nearest taxi driver and embarked upon a rough and perilous journey to the Hollis Street Theatre. Even in blithesome Summer days the taxi trail from the South Station to the Hollis is no path of velvet, but in early March not an atom of comfort does it yield the hastening traveler who moves over its ragged course. There was nothing unusual in the arrival of Winchell Smith—nor in his subsequent conduct. He had been doing the same thing, in the same way, with astonishing regularity for ten weeks, finding consolation for all attendant hardships in the calm reflection that his pet child, "Lightnin'," was still the golden joy of its principal male parent. This time, however, Mr. Smith, who happens to be author and director and, by popular rumor, partner of John Golden in the production of the play, did more than his customary stint of surveying the advance sale, watching a performance and shouting an unemotional good-bye. He talked—freely and decisively. Without flinching, he faced the torture of an interview and came through with words to spare. In fact, he presented himself as a rather nifty talker—a man with something to say and a craving to say it.

BEGINS IN SUB-BASEMENT OF DRAMATIC EDIFICE

HE got away on high while you were still stumbling aboard. "Before I turned playwright, I was an actor," he began by way of explanation, "and this gave me the technical knowledge of the stage and its requirements so necessary to the writer of plays. I don't know exactly how bad I was as an actor, but I was ambitious. Of course, I began as a super and, you know, a super is the lowest sub-basement in the dramatic edifice, especially when you are only one of dozens in a big production. But even a sub-basement must have stairs, and I started right in to find them. Naturally, I wanted to be a star—be one right away—and when I reached the point where I could hold down a fairly good supporting role I began searching for a vehicle suited to my talents. The only thing that turned up was Henry Blossom's 'Checkers,' so I took it to William Gillette. I had played with Gillette and had found him as helpful as an actor as he was sincere and generous as a friend. So when he gave an unfavorable verdict on 'Checkers' I let it go. Afterward when Kirke La Shelle made a fortune with it, Gillette wrote me a note, which I still have. 'I am horrified,' he said, 'at the success of "Checkers," but let us console ourselves with the thought that you might have been rotten in the part.'"

Winchell Smith in Black and White — Mostly Black.

INTERESTING, you observe, but remote. Would Mr. Smith move forward a few years and speak of "Lightnin'"? Indeed, he would—please try to stop the gentleman. With fourteen plays to his credit, two of which he wrote single-handed and the rest in collaboration with other authors, "Lightnin'" came along as a happy climax to a life of prolific writing. This quaint play that smashed into the well-known and oft-mentioned smithereens more theatrical records than any dramatic work known to the American stage was not Mr. Smith's first triumphant effort, but it has developed into his biggest. Its record of three years in New York and nearly two full seasons in Chicago will undoubtedly remain unchallenged for some time to come, notwithstanding the heavily advertised determination of George C. Tyler to cover the "Lightnin'" achievement with "Merton of the Movies." George Tyler is a good showman, he has a wide knowledge of the theatre and he can sense public taste as far as anyone, but he is cutting off a large order for "Merton of the Movies" if he expects it to erase the New York run of "Lightnin'."

LIGHTNIN' CALLED BEST AMERICAN CHARACTER

LET'S get a fresh start. "A good many people have called Lightnin' Bill Jones the best drawn character ever given to our stage," Mr. Smith was saying. "I hope this will prove to be true, but time alone will tell the story and we are content with the good fortune of a fine start. As a character Lightnin' is a combination of strength and weakness, but within his weakness lies his strength—his wonderful appeal. His powers as a gigantic liar are unlimited, yet his harmless lies hurt no one and provide endless amusement. He is always ready to claim greater achievement than anybody. You know he is lying, but it is inspiring to see the old man make his fabulous assertions without the flicker of an eyelash. His prevaricating sins are forgiven because they are inoffensive—there is no meanness in them. He is simply playing at being important."

* * *

IT is quite impossible to discuss "Lightnin'" without speaking of the lamented Frank Bacon. It was Bacon who collaborated with Winchell Smith in writing the play—in fact, "Lightnin'" was Frank Bacon's idea polished and put into dramatic form by Smith. You could call him the play's stepfather. "Of course," continued Mr. Smith, "it is not only unfair but positively difficult to make comparisons between Bacon's Bill Jones and the amusing character that Perry Pollock makes of him, because, on Bacon's own admission, he had been acting the part for twenty years. For seventeen years, up to the time of the earthquake, Bacon played in San Francisco stock companies, chiefly at the Alcazar, and in one of the early plays—the title of which is long forgotten—he had a character called Bill Jones. He was just the kind of character you see in 'Lightnin'"—shiftless, boastful, lying, drinking, but good-natured and friendly. He was a bit more than that. That was really the beginning of the present play "Lightnin'," for after that whenever Bacon impersonated a role in some other play that was a bit lacking in character, the stage manager would come around and say, 'Well, Frank, I guess you'd better Bill-Jones that fellow.' There were many plays in which Bacon dragged in the sure-fire Bill Jones, for there was always a Bill Jones kind of part—a doctor, judge or squire—and Bacon played them all alike. The character of Major Britt, for example, in the old Hartley Campbell melodrama, 'My Partner,' was one of the first to which Bacon applied the Bill Jones touch."

WOULD HAVE GIVEN HAMLET BILL JONES TOUCH

LISTENING was easy, as Mr. Smith painted the picture of Bill Jones' development. "Bill is a natural old soul," he went on; "there is nothing stagey about him. So when Bacon got a stagey part, one which rasped bitter and thither, he just cut out the 'rants' and 'melos' and slowed it down to the tone of old Bill Jones. He probably would have Bill-Jonesed Hamlet's ghost if it would have helped any. Even in the 'Cinderella Man,' in which he was last seen in Boston, at the Wilbur, he spread terror through the soul of Edward Childs Carpenter, the author, with his Bill Jones interpolations. Bacon won the playgoer, and then Carpenter got over his fright. Frank Bacon played Bill Jones under different names in many plays, and also in vaudeville, with his wife and daughter appearing with him in a sketch. His study of the character covered years of observation and practice, while Pollock's is a new, imaginative creation of a player who is sure of his art, even though his conception must, in the nature of things, be in its infancy."

WHATEVER misgiving you might have held regarding Winchell Smith's talent for conversation was wiped away, and it was well worth noting that not even the flow of speech could deflect his good right eye from the constantly growing line at the box office. Bacon is gone, but Bill Jones is still very much alive.

Is Mr. Briggs Busy? Well, Rather

Ed Wynn outdons at his own game!

Wynn writes his own shows and then personally conducts them as the star of the organization. But he does hire a composer for his music.

Now comes Harlan Briggs to the Arlington next week in "The Girl From Up There," appearing in the multiple role of author, composer and star. He does it all—no outside help whatever. The advantages attached to this arrangement are worth much to the man with a knack for things and a willingness to work, for the revenue flows back into his pockets from three sources—royalties for the author, royalties for the composer and a salary for being the show's principal comedian.

Temperament Is Not Ability

There is no excuse for temperament in an actor, is the opinion of Otis Skinner, appearing in "Mister Antonio," at the Tremont Theatre next week. "The more temperament, the less ability,' was a maxim quoted to me by an old actor almost at the outset of my career," Mr. Skinner says, "and I find that in the main his maxim holds good. Of course, there are times when one finds that the temperamental person really has ability and has met with success, but even this person has no defence for his temperamental outbursts because they merely show that success has gone to his head."

Mr. Skinner is universally regarded in the theatrical profession as the most temperament-free actor in America, and, although he is one of the most finished actors on the American stage, he has never relented in the hard work which, as much as his ability, have been responsible for his success. He will listen with the greatest patience to persons from whom he may gain some idea which will be of value to him in his work, and he prepares a new play as carefully as if his entire career were before him.

Prize-Winning Legs a Boston Product

A Boston girl, Josephine MacNicol, is in the cast of the "Greenwich Village Follies," which begins an engagement at the Shubert Theatre Monday, March 12. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart MacNicol, and graduated from the Prince School in Newbury street and then from the Girls' English High School in West Newton street. Miss MacNicol afterwards studied at the New England Conservatory of Music. She then went abroad and took a course in dancing under George H. Busse in London.

Miss MacNicol has the distinction of having won last year in Paris, and this year in New York, first prize for the most beautiful limbs in the world.

Close Call for Company Making Picture

Fears for the safety of Betty Compson and the other members of the company who sailed for the Hawaiian Islands to film the picture "The White Flower" were expressed in hundreds of queries made at the West Coast studio when news was cabled that the City of Honolulu, a trans-Pacific steamship, was burning at sea. These fears were set at rest by word received from Honolulu to the effect that the company had arrived safely at the island port several days before the sea disaster occurred. "The White Flower," a Hawaiian story, was filmed against its native background, and will be on view at Loew's State next coming week.

NEW BILLS NEXT WEEK

TREMONT—Otis Skinner in "Mister Antonio," a drama of American small town life that has served Mr. Skinner with much profit and has given playgoers entertainment of high quality. Presented here at the Colonial several seasons ago. Many of Mr. Skinner's original cast, including Joseph Brennan, Robert Harrison and Joseph McCabe, are in the company.

* * *

ARLINGTON—"The Girl From Up There," a musical comedy, with book and music by Harlan Briggs, who also serves as the principal comedian. An entertainment that relies upon its story and melodies, for although there are twenty girls in the chorus not a dimpled knee is revealed.

* * *

ST. JAMES—"The Passing of the Third Floor Back," played for four seasons in this country by Sir John Forbes-Robertson. In this presentation Walter Gilbert will be seen at the Stranger and Adolyn Bushnell will play Stasia.

* * *

B. F. KEITH'S—Vaudeville, headed by Mrs. Rodolph Valentino, an actress of both the screen and stage. She will be seen in an Edgar Allan Woolf sketch, "A Regular Girl." Other features will be Stella Mayhew, in songs; Enrico Rostelli, a recently imported European juggler; Edna Luedom, comedienne; Dave Stamper, composer, and others.

* * *

PARK—A picture version of Charles G. Norris' widely discussed story of marriage, "Brass," with Sidney Franklin as director. The story is one of domestic tragedy, through which runs a moral. In the cast will be seen Monte Blue, Marie Provost, Harry Myers, Frank Keenan, Helen Ferguson, Cyril Chadwick and Pat O'Malley.

FILM SHOWS BOSTON ACTOR

When the picturization of Charles G. Norris' frank story of marriage, "Brass," is unfolded at the Park Theatre next Monday night the regular theatregoers will quickly recognize in the role of Frank Churchill no less a personality than Frank Keenan. Bearing the reputation among people of the stage as one of the most forceful and intelligent character types of the American theatre, he also commands special interest to Bostonians because it was in this city that he lived as a boy and obtained his start in the profession.

Frank Keenan.

More than twenty-five years ago Mr. Keenan had local theatregoers singing his praises for his impersonation of Fagin in the presentation of "Oliver Twist," made by that stock company recruited mainly from the Boston Museum members which played at the old Grand Opera House. Of contemporary fame also was his playing of Myles McKenna in "Rosedale." Perhaps his greatest role was that of the sheriff in Belasco's "Girl of the Golden West."

A few years ago Mr. Keenan joined the studio stars and has been presented in a long line of successful productions. Recently he has returned to the stage and last Monday registered a sensational success as star in the same part of "Peter Weston."

PLAYS THAT REMAIN

What's What at the Theatres, Boiled Down to Easy Reading for the Hurried Playgoer.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

"Lightnin'" at the Hollis. (Eleventh week.) Most popular comedy of the present generation, with completed runs that broke New York and Chicago records and which threaten to repeat the job here.

* * *

"Just Married" at the Plymouth. (Eighth week.) Something in farce that presents Lynne Overman and Vivian Martin in many laugh compelling situations. There's a bed room scene that doesn't offend good taste.

* * *

"The Fool" at the Selwyn. (Fourth week.) Channing Pollock's play of practical Christianity, with a pleasant mixture of good comedy and forceful drama. The season's most unusual offering.

* * *

Ed Wynn in "The Perfect Fool" at the Colonial. (Fifth week.) A girlie show of popular standard, with Mr. Wynn furnishing the fun and a full company of pretty young things supplying the color.

* * *

"Elsie" at the Shubert. (Third week.) Fun and melody rolled into one of the brightest entertainments of the Lenten season. The first musical play of the year with a genuine plot.

* * *

Gertrude Hoffmann in "Hello, Everybody" at the Majestic. (Second week.) A syncopated musical show, with Miss Hoffmann working overtime in a series of colorful dance numbers. Many gorgeous costumes.

* * *

"Listening In" at the Wilbur. (Third week.) A drama of mystery, built around ghosts that are as tricky as any you have ever met on the stage or off. Mostly comedy, but a full measure of thrills is provided.

* * *

"The Third Alarm" at Tremont Temple. (Second week.) Sensational motion picture play, paying tribute to the brave fire fighters. A stirring drama, beautifully photographed in natural settings.

SYMPHONY CONCERT

The "Faust" symphony of Liszt will be performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the next regular pair of Boston Symphony concerts to be given in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. The chorus which Liszt brings in at the close will be taken by the Harvard Glee Club, and the tenor solo by Arthur Hackett.

TAKES STUDY TO PICK PLAYS

George A. Giles, managing director of the Boston Stock Company, says that picking plays is the most difficult task connected with engineering a stock company. "During my two years at the St. James," said Mr. Giles, "I have spent the greater part of my energy in studying the audience. To a casual observer it would seem that two years of studying the audience should make one well qualified to judge the sort of entertainment to produce, but such is not the case at the St. James, where the audiences are cosmopolitan. From very definite observations, I have been able to divide our patrons into four distinct classes. The first, those who like the company and come every week, regardless of the production; second, those who come out of curiosity—that is, those who heard about our company and come to see just what sort of an aggregation it is; third, those who pick the play, and fourth, the drifters—people who just happen to come. I have named these in their sequence, so far as numbers are concerned, the first representing those who come every week, and the others the traveling audience.

"A great number of the plays are chosen by our regular patrons. For instance, "Passing of the Third Floor Back," which we are presenting this week, will be put on at the request of over three hundred letters which have accumulated since the beginning of the season."

VAUDEVILLE AND PICTURES

LOEW'S STATE—Betty Compson in "The White Flower" and a picturization of the popular stage success, "The Famous Mrs. Fair." Miss Compson's photoplay, "The White Flower," is by Fred Niblo, producer of "The Three Musketeers" and "Blood and Sand." There will also be shown news and comedy reels.

SCOLLAY SQ.—"Only a Shop Girl," a romantic screen story, and Buster Keaton in "Day Dreams." Also five vaudeville acts, headed by "Looking Backward."

BOSTON—John Gilbert in "Truxton King," a screen version of George Barr McCutcheon's novel. Also vaudeville features and news and comedy reels.

GLOBE—Marion Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower." Also news and comedy reels with Sam Cohan's amateurs on Friday.

WASHINGTON—Mary Alden in "A Woman's Woman," Milston Sills and Carmel Myers in "The Last Hour," and Buster Keaton in "Day Dreams." Three days only.

MODERN AND BEACON—"The Village Blacksmith," based upon the Longfellow poem, and Shirley Mason in "Pawn Ticket 210." Also news and comedy reels.

CAPITOL—Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood," with news and comedy reels and special features.

STRAND—Wesley Barry in "Heroes of the Street," and Milton Sills in "The Forgotten Law," for three days only.

CENTRAL SQ.—Bebe Daniels in "The World's Applause," also news and comedy reels and vaudeville. Three days only.

LANCASTER—"The Pride of Palomar," from Peter Kyne's story. Three days only. Also news and comedy reels.

ORPHEUM—"Broken Chains is announced as the photoplay feature. On the vaudeville side of the bill will be seen Ethel Davis, musical comedy star; a musical affair called "Stolen Sweets;" LaFrance Brothers, athletes; Charles and Cecil McNaughton and Irving Edwards. There will also be shown a Buster Keaton comedy, "Day Dreams," and other reels.

OLYMPIA—Charles Ray in "The Girl I Loved," and Buster Keaton in "Day Dreams." Also five acts of vaudeville.

CODMAN SQ.—Mary Alden in "A Woman's Woman," and Herbert Rawlinson and Irene Percy in "The Prisoner," for three days only.

DOWDOIN SQ.—Wesley Barry in "Heroes of the Street," and Tom Mix in Romance Land." Also five vaudeville acts.

HOWARD (Burlesque)—"Step Along," with Julius Howard, Max Coleman and Ida Bernard. Also vaudeville and pictures.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

"The Heart of Wetona," a play made famous by Leonora Ulrich, will be presented at the Somerville Theatre next week, with Harry Bond in the heroic role and Frank Thomas as the Indian chief.

FLONZALEY QUARTET

The Flonzaley Quartet will play its last concert this season in Jordan Hall next Thursday evening, March 8. For the first time in the history of these concerts the quartet will be assisted by a singer, Helen Stanley, a well-known soprano of New York.

PENSION FUND

A Wagnerian program, in which Madame Sigrid Onegin, the new contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will appear as soloist, will make doubly significant the Pension Fund Concert to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow afternoon in Symphony Hall. Madame Onegin, whose Boston debut recently proved her to be easily the most important newcomer of the season, will sing for the first time with orchestra here

NEW YOUNG TENOR

A young tenor of American birth and Irish parentage, Colin O'Moore, has made his first appearance on the concert stage in this country this season. There is considerable interest, therefore, in his coming concert debut in Boston, to take place in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, March 11th.

Real Estate Tragedy Makes the Thrill

A real estate dealer's great dream that went awry was responsible for Emory Johnson being able to secure a big five-story apartment building, which was set afire and entirely destroyed to furnish the fire scenes in "The Third Alarm," now at Tremont Temple.

The real estate dealer constructed the building on the outskirts of Los Angeles, thinking the city would grow in that direction. The building was later condemned by the city as a fire trap, and Emory Johnson, seeing an opportunity, purchased the entire structure at a cost of several thousand dollars.

Under the supervision of the Los Angeles fire department, the big building was set afire, enabling Director Johnson to secure some of the most spectacular fire scenes ever enacted before a camera. F. J. Scott, fire chief of the Los Angeles fire department with a big force of fire fighters and a great amount of fire fighting equipment, co-operated with Johnson and supervised the firing of the building.

AT THE BURLESQUE HOUSES

Cain & Davenport's "Mimic World," which is really three shows in one, comes to the Gayety Theatre next week with Jamie Coughlin as the featured comedian in a company selected for its youth and cleverness. Nearly fifty youths and maidens, none of them more than twenty-one years of age, make up the cast and chorus of this company, which is about the most lively and vivacious that the burlesque circuit ever saw.

Evelyn Murray.

"Hippity Hop" hops into Waldron's Casino next week with a company of fifty experienced entertainers, headed by MacAllister and Shannon, known all around the circuit as "the long and short of it." This is one of the most exhilarating and gorgeous musical revues on the stage this season, with clever comedians and pretty girls as thick as peas in a pod. Vaudeville and dramatic moving pictures will round out the three-in-one continuous performance.

Kitty Madison.

GALLI-CURCI IN FINAL CONCERT

Galli-Curci's last Boston concert of the season will be given tomorrow afternoon at the Boston Opera House. This is Madame Galli-Curci's second concert, and for this time she has chosen a program that will be interesting to the layman as well as the highly informed music lover. It includes the famous aria from "Louise," "Depuis le Jour," and also the "Shadow Song" from "Dinorah" (Meyerbeer).

Galli-Curci

Alexander Chigrinsky, a young Russian pianist, will give a recital in Jordan Hall on Wednesday evening, March 21.

Alfred Casella, Italian composer-pianist, heard with the Symphony Orchestra at its recent concerts in Cambridge and Boston, will give a recital in Jordan Hall on Saturday afternoon, March 17.

* * *

Isa Kremer will be heard here for the second time at Jordan Hall on Friday evening, March 16.

* * *

A "recital in C-sharp minor" will be given by Wilhelm Bachaus, pianist, in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, March 18th. This will be his first recital in Boston since 1914.

* * *

The Ukrainian National Chorus, visiting America for the first time this season, will give a return concert in Symphony Hall on Monday evening, March 12th.

Carlos Salzedo, harpist, and Suzanne Dabney, soprano, will give a joint recital in Jordan Hall on Tuesday evening, March 6.

* * *

A recital of music for two violins will be given by Joey Kryl and Paul White on Thursday evening, March 15 at Jordan Hall.

RAPID PROMOTION.

Hilda Vaughn, who gives a vivid portrayal of Pearl Heming, one of the principal roles in Channing Pollock's play, "The Fool," now at the Selwyn Theatre, was formerly a member of the Somerville Players. Miss Vaughn is a Baltimore girl, the daughter of a prominent manufacturer of that city, and a graduate of Vassar College, class of 1918. Her stage debut was made nearly four years ago, upon the completion of her studies at college, where she was prominently identified with college theatricals.

Kentucky Girl Bright Spot in "Elsie"

Just a decade ago, there appeared upon the local stage a musical comedy, "High Jinks" by name, in which a young girl just past her middle teens was the "cut up."

This young woman, still on the stage, as graceful as ever, is Alda Meade, of the Elsie Company, now at the Shubert.

Miss Meade—she prefers to be known as Ala Meade—is a descendant of a long line of Revolutionary ancestors who, from Virginia trekked with Daniel Boone into the Kentucky wilderness and there became leaders in that aristocracy of culture for which the gentility of the Blue Grass region afterwards became famous.

From "High Jinks" to "Madame Sherry," into "Katinka," and thence on up to the latter day productions including "Tumble In," "Love of Mike," with now and then a fling at the legitimate, a season in stock brings Miss Meade to her present engagement in "Elsie."

Stubbs Played for U. S. in Canal Zone

Down in Central America and the West Indies they like American plays and players. Harry Stubbs, one of the leading comedians in "Listening In," at the Wilbur, knows this because he has taken American companies down around the Caribbean countries and proved it to his own satisfaction.

"When they were building the Panama canal," says the rotund funmaker, "just two things kept the workers along the big ditch from throwing up their jobs. One was the modern sanitary system, which knocked out mosquitoes and fever germs, and the other was the repertory company I took down there. The Panaman government was so tickled with our enterprise that it gave us the use of one of the finest playhouses you ever saw. We played at Panama and then over on the other side, at Colon, and between times we took a run up to Gatun. The workers up there could not very well come to us so we went to them."

Let's Give the Singer a Square Deal

"As a matter of fact," says Miss Helen Booth, "singers are not a bit more temperamental than persons who do not sing, that is professionally. It is time somebody came to the defence of vocal artists."

Miss Booth is the prima donna of "Mimic World," the musical burlesque at the Gayety next week. "Every day you read in the newspapers of persons doing the most ridiculous things. They jump off roofs and run away with other persons' money or wives or husbands. They do all kinds of tricks and are credited with all kinds of reasons and excuses.

"But let a singer, masculine or feminine, lose his or her temper and say or do anything the least bit out of the usual. Immediately there is comment: 'These singers are so temperamental.' Singers are human, of course, but don't think, for goodness sake, that every time a singer does something unusual that it is temperament."

Coming Events

"Greenwich Village Follies" is announced as the attraction at the Shubert on Monday, March 12.

William Courtenay in "Her Temporary Husband" will come to the Arlington for a limited engagement on Monday, March 12.

"Spite Corner," from the pen of Frank Craven, will have its first Boston presentation on Monday, March 12, at the St. James.

"The Fascinating Widow" will be presented at the Somerville Theatre during the week beginning Monday, March 19. Tommie Martelle, female impersonator, has been especially engaged for role formerly played by Julian Elkins.

NEW ARRIVAL IN KEITH'S BILL

Boston does not always wait upon New York—even in vaudeville.

As an example of what may happen in the best of regulated theatrical families, Keith's Theatre here is to have the first American appearance of Enrico Rastelli, a European juggler for whom vaudeville agents have been bidding for some months.

Rastelli landed in New York on the George Washington this week, and on Monday he will show his wares to Boston audiences at the local Keith house. His contract with the B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange guarantees this entertainer a long and unbroken season in this country.

American managers and producers of revues have often before made alluring offers to Rastelli, but it was not until E. F. Albee, head of the B. F. Keith interests, took a hand in the proceedings that any great progress was made.

Europe has termed Rastelli the "world's wonder juggler," and his time heretofore has been completely filled with engagements in all the principal European cities.

Sick Dog Makes Tough Job a Bit Tougher

Now it's a dog that's playing a "heavy" role in a motion picture. But "heavy expense" is the full name of the part played by Ginger in "Broken Chains," which comes to Loew's Orpheum next week. The company, directed by Allen Holubar, went to location on Huntington lake for scenes in which Ginger plays an important part. However, the altitude, or the brand of dog biscuit or something, didn't agree with Ginger, and he fell sick. For several days the company had done nothing but fish, and pray for Ginger's recovery. The highly trained dog had already been registered in many important scenes, and his "double" in appearance and intelligence is not known to exist.

These facts considered, the Indiarubber ice pick was offered as a reward to the rising young efficiency sharp who could suggest a way out of the difficulty. Ginger saved the situation by getting back his health.

REPORT PEGGY READY TO WED LOU TELLEGEN

PEGGY HOPKINS JOYCE

LOU TELLEGEN

As soon as he ceases to be Gerry's first husband, Lou plans to become Peggy's fourth.

That's the gist of a lively report out of Chicago that, as soon as Geraldine Farrar has secured a divorce from Lou Tellegen in proceedings now pending in New York, and as soon as he may be legally free to wed again, the actor will marry the fascinating young Peggy Hopkins Joyce of Broadway and points East and West.

NOT A MILLIONAIRE.

Which is slightly in conflict—by some hundreds of thousands of dollars—with the recent assertion of young Evans Spaulding of Boston, Harvard and Marine Corps activities that Peggy was going to wed a New York millionaire.

Tellegen is not a millionaire.

The Chicago despatch containing the chatter about Tellegen and his expectations of becoming Peggy's fourth husband quoted Tellegen as having admitted he was "fascinated" by Peggy.

HEAPS OF LOVE LETTERS.

The despatch added that Lou and Peggy have been exchanging so many letters that the missives are innumerable.

The Chicago report may ease the maternal fears of Mrs. Mary Evans Spaulding, mother of Evans Spaulding. She summed up her opinion of Peggy three weeks ago in Boston in two words:

"Boa constrictor."

EX-SPRINGFIELD MAN HELD AS BIGAMIST

Springfield, March 3—Egbert J. Nelson, Naval Academy graduate, under arrest in Newark, N. J., and facing extradition to Baltimore on charges of bigamy and passing worthless checks, is wanted by the police here for alleged worthless check operations.

Nelson's first wife, formerly Miss Mabel LaMocsagno, lived here. They were married in 1917 and two children were born to them. It is alleged Nelson, who deserted his wife here, eighteen months after marriage, married a Mrs. Tevicabury in Newark and borrowed $25,000 from her, and later married a Baltimore woman, who is said to be behind the bigamy charge.

HOLD AUTOIST AS DRUNK AFTER CRASH

Travy A. Rudd of No. 303 Ward street, Newton Centre, was arrested today by the Brighton police on a charge of intoxication because he steered his automobile into another operated by Lawrence E. Gile of No. 130 Warren street, Newton Centre. The mishap occurred at Commonwealth avenue and Allston street.

KILLS SELF AFTER LOSSES IN STOCKS

Chicago, March 3.—After a note written three days ago to his sweetheart was delivered today, the body of William Hildebrand, said to have lost $12,000 in —stock market operations, was found in his room today. He had been shot to death. The note informed Miss Eva Contes that he had decided to commit suicide because of financial losses.

ADMINISTRATION IN CHICAGO IS PROBED

Chicago, March 3.—A Grand Jury investigation of the Chicago city administration was authorized today by Judge M. L. McKinley. He broadened the scope of a special jury which has indicted more than a score of persons.

REFUSES WARRANT IN ELEVATOR DEATH

Judge Thomas H. Dowd today refused to grant a warrant for the arrest of Joseph Norton on a charge of manslaughter for the death of George Shedio, the victim of the elevator accident at No. 311 Devonshire street yesterday. The judge took this action at the request of Inspector James A. Dennessey, chief of the homicide bureau. The law required that the inspector make application for the warrant.

TRADESMEN LUG OFF ALL FURNITURE

Miss Frick Is Willed But $7,000,000

MAGNATE LEFT 93 MILLION

Late Steel King Disposed of All but $24,000,000 in Outside Bequests

Miss Helen Clay Frick, whose Summer home at Pride's Crossing is one of the show places of the North Shore, will receive only slightly more than $7,000,000 from the estate of her father, Henry Clay Frick, the steel magnate, it was learned today.

The entire estate of the steel man, who died three years ago, is valued at nearly $93,000,000, but bequests include all but about $24,000,000. It was estimated that Miss Frick, the only daughter, would receive $20,000,000 as her share, but taxes and other claims will reduce the amount considerably.

FREE MRS. LEVY ON CHARGE OF BIGAMY

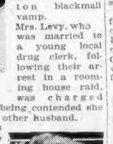
Hartford, Ct., March 3.—State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn announced today that next Tuesday he will nol pros the complaint against Mrs. George M. Levy, formerly Marion Saunders, Boston blackmail vamp.

Mrs. Levy, who was married to a young local drug clerk, following their arrest in a rooming house raid, was charged with bigamy, it being contended she had at least one other husband.

Mrs. Levy.

The authorities were unable to confirm this charge, and the nol pros, to take place on the opening day of the March term of court, is the result.

Under the names of Eleanor Barnes, the young woman, together with Blanche Paul, took part in the "shakedown" of Victor Searles, wealthy Boston artist, in that city. Both women made confessions to the authorities, after coming to Hartford. Both are now residents of other States.



Blanche Paul.

WEIGHS 427 AND GETS FATTER AND FATTER

By International News Service

Toronto, Ont., March 3.—Day by day in every way, John Wilfred Calhoun continues to expand. Today he tipped the beam at 427 pounds and was visibly growing fatter despite efforts to reduce.

Calhoun is thirty-two years old and served in the war. When he found himself growing stout he sought medical advice. Doctors put him on a diet of weak tea and cereals, but John still thrived. A circus manager offered him a "fat man's" job but he turned it down.

JAIL CROWDED AFTER NEGRO GUN BATTLE

Monroe, La., March 3.—The jail at Camden, Ark., was crowded today with negroes, arrested following a racial outbreak at Pearce's Switch, ten miles distant, last night, in which a number of persons were wounded in a gun battle. It was learned today.

RESCUE FOUR AT TENEMENT FIRE IN LYNN

Mrs. Elizabeth Marshal, a paralytic, collapsed in a smoke filled hallway at No. 8 Greenwood place Lynn, today when she attempted to rescue seven months old Stanley Soper during a fire that caused but $150 damage.

Stanley and two other youngsters were carried to the street and all the tenants of the six apartments in the building fled as billows of smoke spread through the halls.

Neighbors hurrying to safety found Mrs. Marshal and helped her outside. Firemen carried out Stanley, Mrs. John Soper, his mother, carried out John Jr. and Mrs. W. S. Giles rescued her eight months old daughter Barbara, ill with scarlet fever.

SOLONS ATTEND JOYCE FUNERAL

State and city officials, neighbors and friends, attended the funeral of Representative Thomas M. Joyce, held today from his home, No. 421 Dudley street, Roxbury, with solemn high mass of requiem in St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury. Rev. D. Edward O'Bryan was celebrant of the mass, Rev. Maurice F. Flynn, deacon, and Rev. Timothy J. Donovan, sub-deacon. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

The honorary pallbearers were: Frank G. Allen, president of the State Senate; B. Loring Young, speaker of the House, Senators John W. McCormack, Patrick J. Melody, William I. Hennessey, William J. Francis and James J. Mulvey, and Representative Henry L. Shattuck, Edward F. Harrington, Elijah Adlow, John Drew, Daniel C. Murphy, William P. Hickey, Tony A. Garofano, Bernard Fickelstein, James W. Hayes, William E. Colman, Coleman E. Kelley and George Penshion.

REV. W. F. DUSSEAULT FREED BY DOCTORS

The Rev. William F. Dusseault, who recently resigned as chaplain of the House, of Representatives was discharged today from the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, to which he was committed for observation. The hospital authorities found there was nothing in his mental condition to warrant application for his permanent commitment to an asylum.

Glass Refuses Job

Washington, March 3.—Senator Glass of Virginia, nominated and confirmed as one of the three Democratic members of the Debt Funding Commission, today declined the appointment. Richard Olney of Lexington, Mass., is a member of the commission.

MAN STABS GIRL WHEN SPURNED

Canton Young Woman Found Bleeding in Doorway; Malden Suitor Accused

In keeping what was to be the last appointment with her sweetheart, Mrs. Helen Snellers, young wife of a Canton man, was stabbed repeatedly by Louis Lamoureaux of Malden when she bade him "Go!"

She is in critical condition at the City Hospital with knife wounds above the left eye, of the left arm, left shoulder and side.

Covered with blood, her unconscious form was found in a doorway in Cazenove street, South End. The police are seeking Lamoureaux, who fled.

GIRL FLEES STATION.

The young wife left her father's home in Canton and was met at the Back Bay station by Lamoureaux, according to her story when she regained consciousness. At the station she told Lamoureaux definitely that their friendship must end. She had told him this several times recently, she said.

The man refused. They quarreled violently, and the girl rushed from the station with Lamoureaux in pursuit. She walked to Columbus avenue, thence to Cazenove street.

In a dark spot in that street, the spurned sweetheart grasped the girl and threatened her with death, according to the police.

"I know what you're going to do. You're going to tell the police. "I'll kill you first!" the man is said to have shouted.

She tried to break away but he held her fast. Then, backing her in a doorway, he drew a knife and slashed repeatedly. The girl's screams attracted the attention of a resident in the house. Lamoureaux fled. The police were called by telephone and the girl was rushed to the hospital.

The girl confessed to the police that Lamoureaux had been "her sweetheart."

Mrs. Snellers separated from her husband, John Snellers, former Canton cigar manufacturer, eighteen months ago. She lives with her parents at No. 25 Wall street. She has four children, the oldest eight years.

COX REFUSES TO SAVE PAPPAS FROM CHAIR

Governor Cox today refused to commute the sentence of Paul Pappas, sentenced to die in the electric chair the week of March 19, for murder of Mrs Alice Arsenault in a Columbus avenue lodging house, December 26, 1918. Counsel for Pappas at once announced that it would appear before the Governor and ask for a stay of execution for a motion for a new trial.

Paul Pappas.

HUSBAND IN BATHTUB STARTS BIGAMY SUIT

Grand Rapids Mich., March 3.—Mrs. Ida Van Lieuw Fetterhof, second of the alleged trio of wives of Frank Fetterhof, charged with bigamy, said that Fetterhof, a former lay preacher, took her by the shoulders and shook her severely whenever she said anything that displeased him. She waited until she found Fetterhof in the bathtub, then asked him whether it was he or his first wife who started divorce proceedings. Fetterhof, she alleges, became so enraged that he was unable to give her a coherent reply, and her trip to the prosecutor's office followed.

Mrs. Huck Not to Contest

Washington, March 3.—Representative Winnifred Mason Huck will not contest the nomination of Morton D. Hull, her opponent in the recent Republican congressional primary in the Second Illinois District, she announced today.

HIGH SUGAR BLAMED ON CUBANS

Speculators Crying Shortage and Forcing the Price Skyward

While Boston consumers, a-marketing, found sugar a dime a pound today, and feverish speculation again featured the New York sugar market, Cuban producers continued to supply local refiners with regular shiploads of raw product.

"There is no scarcity," protested the Boston managers of the biggest buyers of sugar in the world. "Our sheds are bulging with a full month's supply of raw sugar. We get a shipload every third day. Let the people come and get all they need.

"We are the prey of the operators. We buy to add to the small amount grown on our own plantations. The Cubans are mulcting us. Their New York agents are making us sweat. We are paying 5.625 cents. Add 1.76 cents for duty, and the refining costs of 1.5 cents, and see why we must charge 9.13 to wholesalers to day."

In the face of a seemingly adequate supply, professional speculators, outsiders, refiners and European distributors are rushing to the world's new sugar centre, New York, to take part in the speculative orgy.

The professionals and the gamblers are in it for the profits, while the refiners are buying at the market to keep their plants operating, although they foresee no great shortage. The Cuban crop is expected to yield nearly 400,000,000 tons, a normal supply.

The American Sugar Refinery in South Boston and the Revere Sugar Refinery in Charlestown supply practically all of New England's sugar needs. Although deliveries are of record demand, especially to distant points, because of freight embargoes, they find no difficulty in filling orders.

ARREST TO CLEAR $500,000 THEFT

New York, March 3.—Police today believe their efforts to round up the gang responsible for the $500,000 Schoelkopf jewel robbery are one step nearer success as a result of the arrest of Charles Hughes, Bronx chauffeur, who is held here on a charge of robbery.

Hughes was not one of the three men indicted by the Grand Jury charged with theft, but detectives have been watching him for some time. He is said to be a brother-in-law of McGowan, who is under indictment, and to have been friendly with Mathew Biddulph, alias Marshall, the first of the men under indictment to be arrested.

CHIEF SMITH OF PROVIDENCE RESIGNS

Providence, March 3.—Fire Chief William F. Smith today tendered his resignation to the fire commissioners, to become effective March 10.

He did not make public his reasons for resigning, nor did the commissioners discuss it, but friends of Smith say that he resigned for the same reason that caused the resignation of his precessor, Reuben Weeks.

Weeks resigned in August, 1921, charging Richard Dennis, chairman of the Board of Fire Commissioners, interfered with his duties, countermanded orders he gave at fires and in other ways hectored and badgered him.

Smith has been a member of the local fire department since 1898.

The new director of the Veterans' Bureau rose from the ranks to a brigadier generalship. He announces that he is interested only in satisfactory results.

SACCO SHOWS LITTLE SIGNS OF 17-DAY FAST

Nicola Sacco, convicted of murder and awaiting sentence, was a little thinner today than when he started his hunger strike seventeen days ago, but otherwise appeared in good condition, Dedham jail officials said.

His step was firm as he walked to the jail barber shop for a shave and a haircut this morning.

The prisoner had two visitors yesterday, but so far as the jail attendants could observe they brought no food.

LAWRENCE MAN KILLS LODGER

Lawrence, March 3.—Jealousy caused George Athanasopoulos, thirty-five, to fire two shots today into the head of Peter Nasuros and then two more into his back as he lay asleep in the room he rented from his slayer at No. 16 Concord street, police alleged.

The killer calmly reloaded his gun and thrust it in the face of his wife who ran to the scene when she heard the shots. After threatening he went away. The police have found no trace of him.

Athanasopoulos had had difficulty supporting his wife and six children and so persuaded Nasuros, owner of a coffee house at No. 175 Valley street, to room with him. Shortly after he began quarreling with his wife.

NEWSPAPER TRAVELS 25,000 MILES FOR 1c

Twenty-five thousand miles for one cent.

Leonard M. Libby, a news dealer at No. 19 Holland street, Somerville, pasted a penny stamp on a paper and sent it to S. Clifton Bingham, Christ Church, New Zealand.

Libby made a mistake in the address. The paper was returned to him. Careful computation disclosed the distance as 25,000 miles. It took three months. Len thinks this comes near being a record.

MOTHER OF 3 GETS $100 LIQUOR FINE

Mrs. Lena Rakerman, of Harvard street, Dorchester, the mother of three children, arrested for the second time on the charge of keeping and selling liquor, was fined $100 by Judge Churchill in Dorchester Court today. Carnig Koresian, of Milton avenue, Dorchester, was fined $50 on a similar charge.

FURNITURE SEIZED BY DEALERS

Brookline Woman's House Is Stripped; Her Two Lodgers Are Much Peeved

They left the door knobs.

A bleak week-end faces the only two roomers left in the residence of Mrs. Victoria Cahoon, who had numerous callers today at No. 13 Garrison road, Brookline.

They were:

A large gentleman from the gas company, who departed with a broad smile and the kitchen stove.

Two heartless individuals of brawn who hastened away with the beds.

A squad of earnest fellows who lugged off even the pictures on the walls.

Two policemen and one insistent store detective who took away even the landlady.

And the greatly perturbed G. Wilson Macdow.

Thereby hangs a tale about one Sunday dinner that never will be eaten.

"ON THE CUFF."

Mrs. Cahoon convinced Mr. Macdow she possessed much wealth, so he agreed to let her have his fourteen-room house on trial, with the understanding she would buy if everything suited.

Then, say the police, Mrs. Cahoon furnished her house. Using an expression of the street, she got her furniture et al, "on the cuff." The store owners, unkindly, insisted on cash.

Mrs. Cahoon, say the police, had no cash. The store owners swore out a warrant. Judge Dowd today continued her case one week. She is accused of larceny via obtaining merchandise on false pretence.

Meanwhile, Mr. Macdow, a patient man, happened to be at the house when came a coal man with seven tons. Mrs. Cahoon, conveniently, was out. Mr. Macdow paid.

VANISHING PANS.

Days passed. Mr. Macdow thought he should be reimbursed. Try and get it. Mr. Macdow did. He got what the boys call "the air."

Mr. Macdow, he got angry. He told Mrs. Cahoon to move. She said "Yes, I will move, Mr. Macdow," She did. She moved right into court and got an injunction. Mr. Macdow could not eject her.

But—those store owners. They wanted their goods. So they got a writ of replevin.

One of the hardware merchant's men was in the act of replevining some kitchen utensils. In came Mr. Roomer, very irate. He yelled "Leggo that pan."

The replevin man grinned, irritatingly and replied, "Nothing stirring." He slammed the door when he went.

AND THEN THE BED.

Mr. Roomer had hardly recovered when entered the man from the gas company.

He grabbed the stove, unscrewed it from some pipes and walked right out. Mr. Roomer was speechless. He howled in his rage, but the gas man never listened.

Mr. Roomer went to his room to tell his wife. Two brawny men met him at the door. He tried to bar their way. One shouted. Up came the police. They took his bed.

Mrs. Roomer cried, "How will I cook my Sunday dinner?"

Mr. Roomer fingered such of his bankroll as was in his left trousers pocket and said ——.

PLAN EGYPTIAN DECORATIONS AT AUTO SHOW

Egyptian ornamentation — the strikingly impressive style that was at its zenith during the days of splendor in ancient Thebes, more than 3,000 years ago—will be the theme of decoration at the coming Boston Automobile Show, which opens for a week's run in Mechanics Building next Saturday. Never before has the building been so gorgeously decorated.

IDEAS FROM MUSEUMS.

For many weeks, ever before the sensational discoveries in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, Ernest W. Campbell, architect in charge of the decorations, has had his artists visiting the important museums of the country, gathering every conceivable form of authentic Egyptian art, from the largest to the smallest form. Throwing aside all standardized ideals, Mr. Campbell has succeeded in arranging a most elaborately conceived setting.

ENTIRE SCHEME BLENDS.

As though to prepare the visitor for what may be expected, special effort has been made to announce the Egyptian tendency the moment one steps into the hall. The entrance to the main promenade is done in pure Egyptian effect, in structure, coloring and ornaments. Obelisks, columns, tablets, panels and cornices blend into a harmonious whole, and passing through these the visitor enters a unique curved portico, finished in dull gold, strengthened by a warm blending of beautiful tone effects.

The main promenade is roofed in dull gold, with red and blue fret work overhead, the whole studded with crystals, balls and lanterns in blended colors, with side draperies extending down to the arch above the exhibition spaces, from which one may gaze upon all that is modern in mechanical development while standing in a replica of all that is ancient in art.

HUGE CANOPY ELABORATE.

The huge canopy of the main hall is the most elaborate of the decorations. It is composed of a series of central panels in rich Egyptian colorings, and from these in tent formation the side panels swing downward to the soffit of the second balcony, and are finished off with drapery hangings of the same material, with a decorative edge. A large number of immense floral pendants are suspended from the ceiling, adding greatly to the masterful color scheme in perspective.

ASK MR. FIX IT

Dear Mr. Fixit—I am having a lot of trouble with the generator on my 1923 model Dodge touring car. I cannot get it to generate more than five amps, no matter how fast I run the motor. I had new brushes put on it. The voltage tests as near as I can get it is 6.7. It is zero when the lights are burning. The cut-out and starting switch are continually burning out. Can you suggest any way to stop the burning noise in the cut-out? Thanking you in advance.—F. P., Norwood, R. I.

There have been some cases like yours where, in order to make the generator charge from six to eight amps, in the Winter time, it has been necessary to make slight changes in the adjusting bolts. Would advise you to take your car to a Dodge service station to have it done, as it is something which requires an expert to do properly. In the mean time, if you keep burning out this auto fuse in the battery circuit frequently, remove it for a short time and your generator. We would suggest that you have this work done by a Dodge expert.

Dear Mr. Fixit—I have a late 1919 Dodge roadster and have considerable trouble with my battery running down. It is a result I believe, only since the cold. After my motor shows "charged" when it should be "discharge" and vice versa. Every once in awhile I hear a snark jump like a back wire touching metal under the dash but cannot find any bare wire. Thanking you in advance for any help you may give me.—J. H., Newton, Mass.

Your ammeter is wired up incorrectly. The positive wire leading from the starting switch to the ammeter should be on the left hand side of the ammeter when you are sitting in the car and this is the wire to test on this connection. The negative should be on the other side and is the rest of the wires. We think this will clear up your trouble.

Dear Mr. Fix-it—Would you please mail to me the answer to the following question, and if there is a charge for figuring same please enlighten me: (1) What is the average ratio of speeds between the shaft and driving shafts on rear wheels when the drive through the change gears is direct? If you would mail me that answer for above question, I would appreciate it highly.—A. S., Hull, Mass.

The average gear ratio is about four and a half to one. Count the number of teeth on the ring gear in the rear axle and divide it by the number of teeth on the pinion gear and the figure given will be the ratio. For instance, if you had forty-five teeth on the ring gear and ten on your pinion, the ratio would be four and a half to one.

CARBURETOR ON OVERLAND CARS ADDS MILEAGE

One of the chief reasons for Overland economy is the new model Tillotson carburetor that has been installed in the 1923 Overlands. Tests have proven that even in severest weather the Overland, with its Tillotson carburetor, is capable of giving on an average more miles per gallon.

The carburetor is of the non-air-valve type, with no moving parts, thereby eliminating any possible change of mixture by changing the adjustment.

Two separate nozzles, one for idle and the other for running speeds, each having its own adjustment, makes it possible to obtain the adjustment which each individual motor requires.

The high velocity of the air admitted into the nozzle below the gasoline level insures easy starting and makes for maximum economy.

Extensive tests covering a period of two years have shown this design capable of producing maximum power and economy, and having no air valve to get out of order, there is little chance for anything to prevent perfect performance.

OUTPUT OF DORT CARS SHOWS BIG INCREASE

Announcement was made yesterday by the Utterback-Gleason Co., New England distributors, that production figures for the first three months of the Dort Motor Car Company's fiscal year shows a very healthy increase over the corresponding period last year.

Since November 1, when the new Dort Six was announced, a decided advance has been made each week over the same week of last year.

The total percentage of production increase for November, December and January of this year was 161 per cent. greater than the same three months last year—January, 1923, alone being 163 per cent. better January, 1922.

The company officials are very much gratified with the enthusiasm with which the public has greeted the Dort Six, and the official announcement which accompanied these production figures states that the company is anticipating a very substantial business throughout the balance of the year and their production plans are being made accordingly.

LLOYD GEORGE URGES LIBERALS TO UNITE

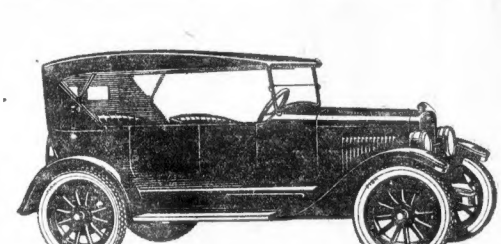
London, March 3.—Making a strong plea for unity of the Liberals, at Edinburgh, former Premier Lloyd George pointed out that while the Liberals are quarrelling among themselves, the Laborites are working away with victories. Lloyd George appealed to Liberals of all shades to confer and consult to end recriminations. "I neither claim, seek nor desire the leadership," he declared. "I am willing to follow any leader who has vision, resolution, wisdom, courage and inspiration to lead the nation."

Lloyd George.

FLINT CARS TO BE FEATURED AT SHOW

Members of the firm of Connell & McKone went to New York last Thursday to see about the Flint show cars for the Boston show. They expected the Long Island City plant of the Flint Motors Company and found things in even better condition than expected.

A Flint touring car, sedan, coupe and possibly a chassis will be sent by express for the local show and also a Mason Road King, a light 1 to 1½ ton express delivery for quick transportation, built by Durant at the Locomobile Works. W. J. Connell, J. L. McKone, Weldon McKone and Frank Coe were in the party, and expressed the highest enthusiasm for the new Flint cars.



Merit Wins New Honors

The great public esteem toward the new Overland has been earned by merit rising above comparison. Greater value has lifted Overland to the highest place in its career.

This is the finest Overland ever built—and at the lowest price. Body lines are longer. The hood is higher. Seats are lower. Triplex Springs (Patented) give greater comfort. The tires are first quality Fisk cords. And the faithful Overland engine yields remarkable economy—25 and more miles to the gallon.

CHANCE HAPPY WITH BERTH THIRTEEN

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Cleveland, O., March 3.—Frank Chance is happy.

"George," otherwise and officially known as William Caldwell of Everett, porter on the Red Sox special, steered Frank into berth number thirteen, and strange as if may appear that was the very thing that brought smiles to the fair face of the Peerless Pilot.

It Was His Lucky Number in School Days

He smiled, then chuckled, then clarified, and in answer to queries as to the reason for his demonstration, Frank declared that things were looking decidedly up, and that if the Red Sox failed to finish up there, he would be obliged to reconstruct his belief in omens.

It would seem that thirteen has been Frank's lucky number for lo, these many years. Back in 'is schoolboy days he took a chance on thirteen and won, and ever since then he's been playing thirteen right across the board.

Now with the Cubs he insisted that he should have berth thirteen on all their trips; when stopping at hotels he specified that room thirteen or 113 or 213 should be assigned to him and he always made it a point to reserve locker number thirteen for his special use at the ball park. And all who are familiar with his baseball career know how successful he has been.

Frank Figures He Is Sitting Pretty With 13

And now when thirteen has popped up again, all of 'is own accord, Frank figures he is sitting pretty. He intends to use locker number thirteen at Fenway Park this season, and will court thirteen whenever the opportunity presents itself.

At this writing the westward leg of the journey to the Ozarks has been completed, and the engineer is steering almost due South. Before nightfall snow will become but a memory to the Red Sox party and tomorrow the B. V. D.'s will win the underwear handicap.

Alex Ferguson Joined the Party at Albany

Thus far the journey has been without outstanding event. The party, consisting of Frank Chance, Secretary Harry Craver, Pitcher Curtis Fullerton, Mrs. Chance and her chum, Mrs. Barney Oldfield, and the Boston scribes was increased by one when Alex Ferguson tripped up the steps at Albany.

Val Picinich, catcher recently acquired from the Senators, was originally scheduled to join up at that point, but it seems Val had the misfortune to fall heir to a bunch of coin a few days ago and must go through the riga morale of filling out an inheritance tax that will delay his departure until Sunday or Monday. Of course he's all broken up about it, even as you or I would be under such circumstances.

Stayed on the Train as I Went to Westfield

At Springfield Vice-President Sheehan of the Springfield Eastern League Club and a Springfield newspaperman, hopped aboard to extend well-wishes to the party and before the wishes were fully extended the special was moving West and gaining speed at every move, with the result that the well-wishers became unofficial members of the party until the train reached Westfield.

Shoon Collins was at the Pittsfield station when the train pulled in, looking as fit as a fiddle. He doesn't start South until next week when the infielders and outfielders are due to report.

The special is due at St. Louis tonight and at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning will anchor at Hot Springs.

"Try To Hit It" The BULLSEYE by NICK FRATLEY

Now it appears that poor Charlie Chaplin is too penurious to undertake matrimony. On his niggardly income he very naturally hesitates to engineer the soul support of a temperamental actress, herself making some mean kopeks, and the lady admits he needs a wealthy wife. It is to laugh, nay, to grin audibly.

We have a vague memory of reading somewhere that Charles started life as a store clerk and, doubtless, beginning in this splendid manner, he acquired lofty notions of the pittance necessary for a comfortable living. Pola is presumably a foreign importation, wherefore her beginnings are shrouded in mystery, but we have a sneaking idea she probably started her career as a ribbon girl in the Scollay Square V and E. But be that as it may, the combined earnings of these two stellar planets will not support them in the style to which they are accustomed, wherefore Comedy and Tragedy will not combine and the public is cheated of still another spectacular press agent's union. We say this, knowing another disagreement is due.

DORCHESTER WINNER IN ICE HOCKEY BATTLE

Dorchester High's hockey team took a firmer grip on first place in the City Hockey League today, defeating Commerce High, 3 to 1, in the weekly play-off at the Arena. English High won over West Roxbury, 4 to 0; Trade beat Hyde Park, 1 to 0; Boston Latin trounced Mechanic Arts, 3 to 0, while East Boston and Brighton played two five-minute overtime periods without a score.

The Dorchester team showed new life in taking the fast Commerce team into camp. Captain Kontoff worked his team hard in all three periods and, as a result, had the Commerce team on the defence the best part of the third period. The line-up:

DORCHESTER.		COMMERCE.
Manson, Lincoln, r.w.		Daley
Kontoff, Cooper, c.		Coffey, Farley
Naigles, Butler, l.w.		r.w., Tyrell
Goldfine, Harrell, r.d.		l.d., Chisholm
Howard, l.d.		r.d., McCarthy
Feinburg, g.		g., Richards

Score—Dorchester 3, Commerce 1. Goals—Matson, Coffey, Goldfein, Kontoff. Referee—McGovern, Hardigan.

The East Boston and Brighton game went two overtime periods without a tally. The line-up:

EAST BOSTON.		BRIGHTON.
Clark, r.w.		l.w., Donovan
Leaman, c.		c., Nusspickle
Durnett, l.w.		r.w., Connors
Benson, r.d.		l.d., Olson
Messer, l.d.		r.d., Taylor
Higgins, g.		g., McQue

Score—Boston 0, Brighton 0. Referee—McGovern, McCarthy.

English High continued to hold second place in the hockey standing by winning over West Roxbury 4 to 0. Smith playing right wing for English was high scorer for the day with three goals. The line-up:

ENGLISH		W. ROXBURY
Smith, O'Keefe, r.w.

BRAVES' LEADER LOOKS FOR A BIG SEASON

By NICK FLATLEY.

Somewhere on the rails—Dear Editor—Don't blame me if this story is late. You know how it is on the railroads these days. Here we are supposed to be in New York while I'm writing this, but it where we are is New York, why Hendrik Hudson would be lonesome, and you couldn't find First avenue, not to mention Fifth, or any of the others.

However, this first division of the Braves is trickling South gradually and sooner or later will land in St. Petersburg in time. Manager Mitchell hopes to open practice Monday morning. Mitch and Jerry Neary and Duke Farrell, the only baseball regulars present thus far, are in a very optimistic mood.

Like Most Baseball People Expect Big Season

Like most of the baseball people we have met in the last few months, they expect a big season. There's no reason for the expectation, that you could pin a finger on, but it's there just the same. Judging from reports from various owners of the universe, you find the same thing everywhere.

And optimism in Boston, after what has happened at our ball parks in the last few years, means something. It's just like a parley coming through. Something that shouldn't happen, but strangely enough does now and then.

Tony Marsh and Fred Lake Were Talkin' Baseb'l

Speaking of optimism, we gathered a pretty good sample of it yesterday, just before we picked up the last of the last minute things at the Copley Square Garden. Hastening along Washington street, we met Tony Marsh and Fred Lake. They were talking baseball, of course. Fred used to be a fine catcher, and was manager of the Red Sox just before Bill Carrigan came.

Tony was secretary of the Braves for a long time, a part owner for a longer time, and is the country's veteran and most chronic fan, absolutely. He hasn't missed a ball game since they started to charge admission, and you know how long ago that was.

Two Leagues Represented by the Old Schools

Anyhow, Fred and Tony were chatting. There we had the two leagues represented by the old schools. Smart representatives, too. These old boys know the game, and how it works out and all that.

"Well, Fred," quoth Tony, "it looks like the old days are coming back. The Braves—"

"Say, those Red Sox—" quoth Fred.

"The Braves this year—" quoth Tony.

"Now those Sox—" interpolated Fred.

"But listen, the Braves—" interpolated Tony.

And that's the way it went. We left the pair of them Braving and Soxing as the shades of evening descended to hide the slush on Washington street, and neither one apparently had a chance of finishing a sentence. But their enthusiasm is a good sample of the prevalent spirit.

One year ago either would have said "Howdy" and if baseball happened to be mentioned, strolled off with a hurried date somewhere.

JUNIOR CHAMPIONS IN AMATEUR BOUTS

Three junior champions, Boston boys, who recently won their titles at the New York tournament, will compete in the amateur tournament of the St. Joseph's T. A. S. at Commercial Hall, on Monday night.

Arnold Ryan in the 118-pound class, Mickey Landers in the 135-pound class and Ed Sardello in the 147-pound class, have entered the tourney. Tom Kirby, light-heavyweight champion will not enter for the simple reason that there is no 175-pound class on the card.

Five classes will be held Monday night, including 112, 118, 126, 135 and 147-pound class.

This will be the last tournament before the N. E. championships which will be held at Mechanics Building March 23.

Mike McTigue Starts Training for Siki Bout

By DENIS O'CONNELL.

Dublin, March 3.—Mike McTigue is here to begin training for his fight with Battling Siki here March 17.

Siki was reported to be a short distance away. This information set aside reports that he had escaped his manager en route from Paris, and declared it was useless to fight because he had been crippled in a taxicab accident.

McTigue said he is in fine condition.

"I am going to win and then meet Carpentier. I am sure I can beat Georges, too. Then I'll seek a fight with Jack Dempsey for the world's championship."

By Mabel McKee

HIS name was Michael Flaherty, and Rose Marie heard about him the first noon she ate her lunch at the little college tea room.

"THERE'S A PEACH OF AN IRISH PLAY AT THE MOVING PICTURE HOUSE"

The girls from the newspaper office just around the corner were talking.

While they were talking, Michael Flaherty came into the tea room. His Irish blue eyes his dark hair and his good Irish features charmed Rose Marie. All of the men who taught over at the conservatory to which she had just come as the new secretary had long hair, thin, anemic looking hands and faces, and long, flowing ties and corduroy, wrinkled suits.

Michael was wearing a clean, gray flannel shirt, dark trousers and a red sweater. He kept a tailory shop between the conservatory and the tea room, Rose Marie learned later. He came to the tea shop very often, Rose Marie soon learned, too, and that while he liked all the girls, he was always ready to act as "a substitute," but never so much as one word had he said to any of them about being devoted to any one.

Had His Chances

"Though every one of us has given him many a chance to propose," the girl in the circulation office of the newspaper office had said frankly.

Now it was the beautiful mother's death which had brought Rose Marie to the conservatory. And it was her longing for the beautiful mother which was making Michael Marie thin and pale, and her eyes have a starving-to-death look in them. It was this look that brought Michael Flaherty to her table day after day. He encouraged her to talk about her mother, knowing that one of the best ways to ease grief out of a heart is to talk it out.

"There's a peach of an Irish play at the moving picture house," he would sometimes say.

But Rose Marie did not seem to hear him.

Or again he would remark, "I have a new reader, of the fifty-ver order, and it's not so lively riding with oneself."

Then one noon Rose Marie told him of the library she had found. She would like to go there and read some of the magazine stories," she said. "Those at the conservatory are so timid and queer. I would go if only my beautiful mother were."

"Sure, and I'll give my hardest to be her substitute," Michael said in his most winning way. "Having a mother of my own would make me a mighty good substitute for one I'm thinking."

Rose Marie beamed at Michael. And together they went to the library that evening. They were so interested in the magazines that they went back the next evening, and then the next. So that the newspaper girl, seeing them coming back in the "new rooster of the flivver order," twitted Rose Marie in the next day.

"You're on, too," the society editor fluttered her hands prettily. "But be careful, child. Michael's only a substitute. Some men go along that way all their lives. They don't want to have the steady habit for it means the responsibility of a home every day."

A shadow passed over Rose Marie's face but she smiled bravely. She liked Michael and she knew he liked to be with her. But she knew he liked the other girls, too. "I'm always their substitute," he had told her. "Sure they're all dreams and I'm honored by being a substitute for them."

That evening as her way to the library she mentioned the girls again and he repeated his assertion. And though it almost broke her heart to do it, she pushed away her admiration of him and remembered her mother again and grew sad and thoughtful.

The next day the girls at the office noticed it. "We must give her some recreation," they said. "The poor little thing is pining for her mother, and we must let her meet some lively people."

They did not dream she was falling in love with Michael Flaherty or they would have felt more sorry for her than ever. Instead they asked her to their next party and said, "If you don't know any one else to ask, ask the good ole substitute. You don't need to tell him anything but that you're going to a party and want him to go along and he'll say, 'Sure, I'll be happy to be your substitute.'

She Asked Him

So Rose Marie asked him. In a mechanical, tired, disappointed voice she asked him. And then she waited for his answer—well known to every one, but it did not come. He just sat and looked straight at her for a long time and finally he said, "Whom did you ask before me?"

Rose Marie colored. "I didn't ask any one," she suddenly flared back. "I don't know any one and—"

Then Michael Flaherty seized her hands. "Oh-boy!" he burst out. "I've waited years for a girl like you to build a little home for and work a little harder for and love, and—"

And like the Irish lovers do, he found a better way for his lips to close than by talking. And that was the way the substitute ceased to exist.

Love Plays No Favorites

IN his photograph album, where he keeps all his old sweethearts (and he has had so many, by jolly! that when he looks through it for old time's sake he often has to say, "now—who to the dickens was this—and what was her name?")—well, where he keeps his pics of all his old sweethearts, those that are, and those that are to come, there are no favorites—there is no one type that is given choice place—no one style of beauty more lovingly enscribed than another.

Dark girl ranks with fair one in his heart; even the pale-hued girl of neutral coloring can be his darling; dainty lady in silk and feathers and lace—perfumed, accompanied by her silky dog—breathing city air—rolling down city streets, is no different in Love's family album from the girl on the cliffside, the outdoor girl with slender, sunburnt arms and neck, the girl who sits in the grass and does not care how her hair looks, who flees from charity balls and goes to the surf as to a lover.

"Fifth Avenue, New York, or the wild, poppy-gilded coast of California, she is all the same to me," says he, "and I sing their praises; for each keeps a date with a lover—and for a rendezvous with love—city street and gull-haunted seacoast are one and the same!"

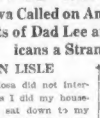
WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Rosa Cordova Called on Anne to Find Out the Whereabouts of Dad Lee and Called the Americans a Strange "Bunch"

By ANN LISLE



I HAD TIME TO REVIEW THE STRANGE EVENTS

THIS time Rosa did not interrupt, so, as I did my household tasks and sat down to my tiny "festive board," I had time to review the strange events of the whirling kaleidoscope in to which my evening at Daisy's had resolved itself.

Evvy's return was in itself sufficiently startling. But the calm and casual way in which she brought Pancho Mateixa upon my horizon was even more so. And that Pancho should speak English, after all Nello's declarations to the contrary, gave me a terrific feeling of suspicion.

In spite of my worry and puzzled fears lest Rosa and Nello working hand in hand shut me out of all the sallent points of Jim's affairs, I found myself remembering Irma Warren and the weary unhappiness on her lovely fresh young face. But the imminent necessity was to hurry through the household tasks and down to the office. There I found Betty hard at work again, and Miss May wearing her proud smile of discovery.

Young Tornado

Into our atmosphere of proud and happy work, Rosa Cordova came whirling like a young tornado. It was amusing to see her natural deference for Miss May, who has managed somehow to win Rosa's wayward, but evidently staunch affections. But her snobbish uncertainly about Betty, whose "class" Rosa seems to suspect, but whose position in the office she can't make out, amused me. However, if Rosa can't interpret Betty I'm sure that her cleverness isn't as diabolically certain as I sometimes fear. She isn't the brilliant person she sometimes crumples me up by seeming.

After flinging a word or two to the other occupants of the office, Rosa demanded curtly:

"Is it maybe to the private office we can go to discuss what is only disturbing if we talk here now?"

"Indeed it is best not to interfere with the important things Mrs. Winston and Miss May have on their books." I replied, taking my cue from Rosa.

Once in the private office Rosa doffed the mask she seemed to have been wearing over her feelings. Her face twisted into a daring mass of furious emotions.

"Where is that Dad Lee of yours?" she snapped.

"I wish I knew"—— I began.

"And who is the girl with the yellow hair, and the blue roadster who takes from me Pancho just when it is I think I shall find something out?" she went on.

"Why, ask me?" I inquired, suavely, remembering that I'd been deceived about Pancho's knowledge of the English language, and doubting the advisability of revealing to Rosa that "the yellow-haired girl" is my friend Evvy Mason.

"Why, ask you, indeed?" repeated Rosa, scornfully. "Why expect anything from any of you Americans? You are a strange—how you say—bunch! But maybe we are just so funny, we who are fire-eaters. Well, it is a waste that I make of last evening. First it is Nello who sits and scowls all through the supper, so that Pancho is afraid to make friendly with me. And then comes the little Miss Mason and takes away Pancho in a minute. She is one fine flirt, this little Miss Mason, I think. And me, I am detective. I know her name, anyway."

I was saved from comment on Evvy by a knock at the hall door. I opened it to find a crisp and capable looking boy standing there. He was a sturdy urchin, rosy cheeked and bright eyed and his snub nose had an engaging slant. "I've a Pan-Am here somewhere," "Mr. Lacy sent me up on Jerry's recommend, and Mr. Lacy he says to put me right to work and then read this here letter."

Suddenly I was conscious of the door—ajar, making it quite a simple matter for Rosa to hear each word the boy said. I found myself with an acute distaste for her to hear anything, but I couldn't betray this by closing the door. So, I steered young Frank out to the big office and presented him to Miss May with a friendly admonition to start him out with a jump.

"Will do. Bring it is ma'am" he said cheerfully. "I'm built for speed and endurance, the both of 'em—and tough. I'm hoping to be a great actor some day. I guess I got a long spell first of being a good office boy."

Alert Manner

Delighted by his alert and yet not "cheeky" manner, I left Frank with Betty and Miss May and hurried back to Rosa, absentmindedly carrying in my hand what I took for a letter of introduction. Rosa made no comment on the interruption, but took up her complaint a step beyond where she had left it.

"That Miss Mason, she steal my Pancho. So it is just where before it was about this so vanishing Dad Lee of yours."

"And that's nowhere," I commented, striving for a pleasant tone.

"What do we do?" demanded Rosa. "Is it not perhaps time you dosamething? Do you think of your nice little father so much that you let him ruin Jaime and think you are one fine daughter and pretty good wife, too—yes-da?"

"No, that is not the truth," I replied, hanging on to my poise. "Read the letter from your good friend, Mr. Lacy," admonished Rosa, suddenly shifting her point of attack. "Maybe, when you have been cheered up by what he has to say to you we get on better. It does a lot of good to hear from—a nice man."

"It does a lot of good to hear from a good friend," I replied, refusing to be baited.

A RHYMING OPTIMIST

—By Aline Michaelis—

JUST sometimes in the midst of the hurry and rush, comes a hint of the days that are gone, and it brings me the peace that I feel in the hush when the darkness dissolves in the dawn. Oh, it may be the words of some tender old tune on the lips of a laughing-eyed girl, or a rose-petal saved from some long-faded June, or it may be the twist of a curl, and it may be the spinning wheel there in its nook, or a stave of the minuet's air, or a faded fine penned in some musty old book, or the candles' soft glow on your hair. But, whatever the cause, there are spells that return from the days that are vanished and done, and sometimes for the grace of those seasons I yearn as I sit by the dial in the sun. People say there's a glamour the distance can cast, as a scene is enhanced by the haze; and I dream, looking back, that no friend failed his friend and no cloud shadowed love in those days. There was nothing beck there of the mud, breathless rush and the strife that keeps goading us on; men could pause then to joy in the song of the thrush and to treasure the pageant of dawn. It is only a thought like a whisper that sings as an echo is borne on the wind; when some light fingers lie on the spinet's old strings; but it brings distant joys to my mind. Just sometimes when the shadows are gathering fast, and the toil of the daytime must cease, comes a hint of the grace of the years that are past with their fruitage of respite and peace.

ROYAL ROMANCES

CHARLES II. AND NELL GWYNNE

By Barbara Bayne

WHEN a child of a girl, born "west of Temple Bar," apparently without a chance in the world to rise above her humble station, laughed and danced her way to success and into a king's palace, no wonder London was astounded.

Eleanor Gwyn, with her brave, brave heart and inimitable, contagious laugh, danced herself into the heart of Charles II. and until the day of his death shared the popularity of a high-born favorite, the Duchess of Portsmouth.

That brilliant, fearless woman and intriguante, Madame de Sevigne, says of them: "Nell jumps her, steals the king from her and laughs about it. She has a son by the king." Titles were conferred upon this child and later the king made them the "new rooster of the flivver order," twitted Rose Marie in the next day.

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

Charles Dickens used to find that ideas and plots would flow upon him in the crowded streets; but for the purpose of actual setting down on paper he required to shut himself up in his room.

The presence of a stray piece of paper on the floor, or the absence of a book from its accustomed place, would upset his thoughts completely.

Sculptor found that it was hopeless for him to attempt to write unless he had all his books about him, while Ruskin, Tennyson never felt at home unless working in their studies overlooking a garden.

Carlyle and Bacon preferred to write in a garret containing only a table and a chair, whereas Thiers and Eugene Sue surrounded themselves with luxurious carpets and beautiful furniture.

Jean Jacques Rousseau would dress himself in his best clothes before sitting down to write; Lytton would don court dress, and Goldsmith, his favorite plum-colored suit. Buffon, the naturalist, sported a spotless white shirt with starched frills.

Emile Zola, writer of so many exciting novels, always used red ink, and Sardou, a particular kind of paper.

St. Paul's, Covent Garden, has a curious history. The church formerly occupying the site was burned down, and the Duke of Bedford of that day yielded reluctantly to representations that it was his duty to build a successor. "Build me a barn," he said to Inigo Jones. "Your fame," said the great architect, "will build your barn, and mine in the world." And that is just what he did. St. Paul's Covent Garden, is a vast barn in design, with wide overhanging eaves.

A SMART SPORTS OR UTILITY COSTUME

8847-3696—Fashions come and go, but the separate coat and skirt remain forever. The coat 8847 here illustrated is easy to develop, and smart in broadcloth, jersey or twill. It is also good for velvet. The skirt, 3696, with its smart "hidden" pockets, is good for sports materials as well as for serge, velours and broadcloth.

The skirt, 3696, is cut in 7 sizes: 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34 and 36 inches waist measure. It will require 2¾ yards of 44-inch material for a 28-inch size. The coat, 8847, is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Two and one-half yards of 54-inch material will be required for a medium size. The width of the skirt at the foot is about 2 yards.

A PLEASING GROUP OF THINGS

4229—This combination includes a work basket, a utility case and a pin box and spool holder combined. The latter could also be developed as a button box. The work basket is good for cretonne, silk, linen or denim. The utility case may also be made of cretonne, linen, denim or crash, but is best rubber lined or made of rubberized materials. The spool holder may be of silk, canvas, denim, cretonne or crash. A good suggestion for the work basket would be found in tan linen, embroidered in red and lining of red satin or sateen. Cretonne in lovely pink and green tones would also make this a serviceable article. The basket sections could also be woven of raffia over a card board foundation, and also lined with silk. For the pin box the same materials would serve that could be used for the work box. For the utility case there are lovely bubberized silks and cretonnes that will be very good for this article.

It required 1⅞ yards of 36-inch material for No. 1, 1¼ yards of 27-inch material for No 2, and ⅞ yard of 24-inch material for No. 3.

WEATHER CONTROL

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

IN the scientific sense of the world "control," it is possible for man to control the weather. In fact, he already does so to a considerable extent. But to control the weather in the ordinary and usual sense of the word would be a far more popular achievement, yet even that may not lie absolutely beyond reach.

When a scientist speaks of "controlling" phenomena he means checking up his observations of them in such a way that he can discover the natural "law" underlying them. A natural law is simply nature's regular way of doing things. When that has been thoroughly explored and comprehended then, in some cases, science is able to make combinations of nature's ways, or laws, whereby new effects are produced. Scientific control implies at least the power of prediction.

Now, the simple truth is that notwithstanding the great progress made by the science of meteorology, we still do not know enough of the details of the ways of the weather to predict with certainty what it is going to do. The official weather predictors often hit it, but, too often to permit of complete public confidence, they also miss it.

This is not their fault, but their misfortune. It may require a hundred years of continued study to thoroughly control the weather in the scientific sense. When that has been achieved it will be time to consider the question of control in the popular sense.

Just now there is a project on foot which may turn out to be the most effective step toward revealing the exact condition of the atmosphere to the north of us, which has a direct influence over our weather. The Canadian government is going to establish three radio stations in the vast Mackenzie River valley, which Major Bowie, of the United States Weather Bureau, says is one of the three great "cold centres" of the Northern Hemisphere. The other two northern cold centres are Greenland and northeastern Siberia.

From these centres "rivers of cold wind" roll toward the tropics. One is reminded of Maury's description of the Gulf Stream as a "river of warm water" flowing northeastward through the Atlantic Ocean. When the Mackenzie region is piled up with cold air, reinforced from Siberia, and room is made for it toward the south by the rising of the warm air of the American tropics, down it comes across our northern borders, like an artificial glacier, and, if the conditions are such as to maintain its flow for a long time, it may, as has happened since January 1 this year, keep us shivering for many weeks on end.

Now this does not happen every year, and up to the present time nobody has been able to predict with certainty when it will happen. The chief reason why such prediction has not been possible is that there have been no stations in northern Canada where the local conditions could be studied on the spot and from which regular reports could be transmitted to the United States, the country most interested in the assembling and the marches and counter marches of these atmospheric hordes from the realm of Winter, where the cold of space seems to descend upon the earth like a flickering threat.

THE ENEMIES OF WOMEN By BLASCO IBANEZ

Start Here Today This Engrossing Story of Life and Love from the Master Pen of One of the World's Greatest Novelists

The Duchess de Delille and her son Georges

A Russian Prince of Fabulous Wealth and Some Friends Bind Themselves to Bar All Women From Lives

THE STORY TO DATE.

Prince Michael Fedor, a Russian of fabulous wealth, is at Monte Carlo while the Great War is on. With him is his friend, Attilo Castro, and other acquaintances. He announces, to the amazement of his hearers, that he is ruined. The Prince proposes that Castro and a few of their friends live together with the proviso that no woman shall enter their lives. They will be known as "The Enemies of Women." Castro tells the Prince he has seen the Duchess de Delille. She calls at the Villa Sirena and asks the Prince to finance her gambling system. He refuses, but grows interested in her, and later calls at her home.

By Vicente Blasco Ibanez,

Author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and Other Novels of World Renown

THE guests at Villa-Sirena would also have been surprised to hear him talk in this fashion. Alicia's surprise caused her to forget all precaution as a pretty woman and lift her head, taking away her hands. Her face was red, her eyes tremulous and overflowing. A tear hung from a lock of her hair. She realized that she must be looking terrible, but what did she care?

"Yes, I love him; I love him more than anything in the world. It is on his account that I go on living. If it weren't for him I would kill myself. But he isn't what you think. No, he isn't."

With her face so reddened with weeping, it was impossible to detect a blush; but her gestures, the expression of her face, and the tone of her voice rebelled with shame and indignation against the suspicion of the Prince.

A Revelation.

She went on talking in a low voice, without daring to look at him, hurrying her words like a penitent anxious to get through with a difficult confession as soon as possible.

She paused for a moment, as though to gather strength.

"He is my son."

Michael, who was expecting some extraordinary, some monstrous revelation worthy of her mad past, was unable to restrain an exclamation of astonishment:

"Your son!"

She nodded: "Yes, my son."

With lowered eyes, in the same nervous tone as though making a confession, she went back over her past. How surprised she had been, how angry in those days at the cruel trick love had played in cutting off the best years of her life!

Her indignation was like that of the citizens of ancient Greece who began a riot when they learned of the pregnancy of a courtesan who was considered a national glory, a beauty whom the multitude came from afar to see, when she showed herself nude in the religious festivals. They were bent on killing her unborn child as though it had been guilty of a sacrilege. Alicia, too, used to consider herself a living work of art and wanted to punish the sacrilege of her child with death. How she wished she might rid herself of the shame that was throbbing in her vitals! Besides, what tortures she had undergone in her efforts to hide it and go on leading her life of pleasure as before, suffering anything rather than permit her secret to escape.

There were tears in her voice as she recalled these scenes.

"But how about your husband?" Michael asked.

"We separated at that time. He could operate in my love affairs in silence; he could pretend not to know about them. . . . But a child that wasn't his own!

But the reason for the separation had never got out. No one except her husband and the maid who was still with her—had ever learned that a son had been born to Alicia.

"There were times when I was quite happy," Alicia continued. "I learned to know new, unsuspected joys. I would suddenly leave Paris; lots of people thought I was occupied with some new lover. No; I was going to see my little boy, my George, first in London, later in New York, but always in a large city. I could live with him, and play at being a mother, with a living doll that kept getting bigger and bigger—bigger!

"Do you remember the night I invited you to dinner? I had just come back from one of those trips, and in spite of that, just think of the foolish things I said. I imagined myself Venus, or Helen, passing before the old men on the wall.' And in order to give myself up completely to a paroxysm of maternal pride, I was thinking of my heroines, who were my rivals. Helen had had children, and men went on killing one another for her. Venus had not escaped maternity, and gods and mortals continued to adore her, in spite of the fact that she had a son fluttering about the world."

But a fixed idea seemed to dominate Michael as he listened to her.

"And the father? Who is the father?"

The tone of his voice was practically the same as before: a tone of hostile curiosity, of aggressive spite.

Another wave of astonishment swept over him when he saw that she was shrugging her shoulders.

"I don't know; it doesn't make any difference to me. Other women, in like circumstances, fasten the paternity on the man they are most interested in. I have forgotten them all. My son is mine, mine only."

She had the majestic indifference of the serene and fertile forest that spends its blossoms to the pollen scattered through the air like a golden rain of love. The new plant springs up. It belongs to the forest, and the forest keeps it, without showing any interest in learning the name and origin of the wandering source of life borne hither willy-nilly on the wind.

Quite Indifferent.

There was a long silence.

"One day, on arriving in New York," she continued, "I made a terrible discovery. I found my George almost as tall as I was, and strong-looking, with the serious air of a grown man, though he wasn't quite seven. I'm ashamed to think it; but I mustn't lie; I hated him. Venus might have a son, as long as the son remained eternally a little child through all the centuries, like one of the most amusing babies that are dressed in a whimsical fashion, and are the mother's pride and amusement. But my own son, with his powerful body, his strong hands, and solemn face!

"It meant that I should grow old before my time; I should have to renounce my youth so as to keep him by my side; I could never resign myself to declaring that I was his mother. And I fled from him, a number of years go by, without paying attention to anything in regard to him, excepting to send the means for his complete education.

"He came to Paris when I was least expecting him. The venerable friend who was looking after his education there in France had died. I found a man, a grown man, in spite of the fact that he wasn't over sixteen. My first feeling was one of annoyance, almost anger. I should have to say farewell to youth, and change my mode of life on account of this intruder. But I grew accustomed to him at once.

"You could never understand, no matter how much I tried to explain it to you. I swear it was the happiest time in my life. There is no love like that. Besides we were such good comrades. I suddenly felt as though I were a girl of his age again; so, younger than he. George used to give me advice. He was so wise for a boy of his age; and I used to do what he said like a younger sister. He let me mother drag him along and introduce him to a world of pleasure and luxury that dazzled him, after his sober, athletic life with a stern educator.

"And I leaned proudly on his arm, laughing at the false ideas people had of our actual relation. How we used to dance, the year before the war, without anyone suspecting the true nature of the affection that bound me to my partner!"

Alicia paused to linger on these delightful memories. She smiled with a far-away look in her eyes as she thought of the malicious error people had made.

But the momentary serenity with which she had related this happy period in her life gradually vanished. She went on talking in a subdued voice choked from time to time by

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

A PORTABLE BARBER SHOP

PEKIN is anything but a beautiful city. It is monotonous with its endless wall-lined streets. There isn't a tree to relieve the eyes from the tiresome drag of the buildings and the filth of the streets.

One sees poverty and misery with almost every glance. There is nothing stimulating in Pekin. Of course the city is interesting, on account of its age and the importance it has held for centuries in the ancient land.

To the average traveler, perhaps the most interesting thing to be seen is the street life. Here one sees many unusual sights which are not to be witnessed in any other country.

In several lines of business activity, the question of rent is entirely eliminated. For instance, the tool-maker carries his blower and charcoal stove with him. When he finds a customer, he squats in the street right where he is and deftly fashions the implements ordered.

Again, the itinerant restaurateur carries his store right with him with steamers which fit over it. He busily dispenses hot potatoes, steaming rice and wretched doughy bread.

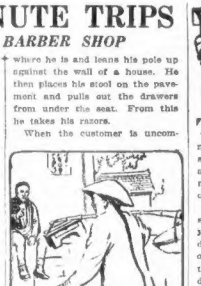
But perhaps the most enterprising of these street merchants and tradesmen are the Chinese barbers.

It is no unusual sight to see one of these artists of the tonsorial school shambling along the street with a long carrying-pole over his shoulder.

On one end of the pole is a stool, on the other, a large brass basin.

When he encounters a man who is in need of his services, he stops where he is and leans his pole up against the wall of a house. He then places his stool on the pavement and pulls out the drawers from under the seat. From this he takes his razors.

When the customer is uncomfortably seated, he places the brass basin holding the water by his side and starts to work.



A Chinese Barber.

Carrying his barber establishment right along with his has its advantages. His rent is nil and his customers do not have to sit impatiently, reading last year's magazines and waiting for the magic "Next!"

DAILY HOROSCOPE

Mary Blake Says:

Today Lucky if You Show JUDGMENT

TODAY promises well unless you allow your good judgment to be overcome by excessive sentimentality. The influences are favorable not alone for business, but for the private affairs of life.

In all matters that come up for settlement today, act rather on your first thought and do not delay making a decision. It is an old, trite saying that "second thoughts are always best," but today the indications point to the opposite and at the end of the day you will have reason to congratulate yourself if you have been influenced by your good impulses, rather than by mature deliberation.

If you are a girl and in doubt as to the state of your affections, your impulses, provided they are good ones, will show you today the right course to adopt.

If you are a mother, and in doubt as to what you shall do with your child, act on your first good impulse, and the result will be peace of mind for yourself and happiness for your child.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

BE SURE TO READ THEM TO CHILDREN

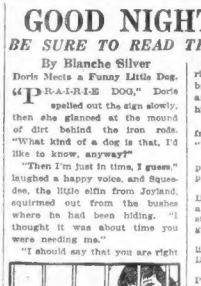
By Blanche Silver

Doris Meets a Funny Little Dog.

"PRAIRIE DOG," Doris spelled out the sign slowly, then she glanced at the mound of dirt behind the iron rods. "What kind of a dog is that, I'd like to know, anyway?"

"Then I'm just in time, I guess," laughed a happy voice, and Squeedee, the little elfin from Joyland, squirmed out from the bushes where he had been hiding. "I thought it was about time you were needing me."

"I should say that you are right on time, Squeedee," Doris answered, catching the tiny elfin by the hand. "The sign says there's a prairie dog in here, but I can't see anything except that mound of dirt. They must have taken him out, I guess. What's a prairie dog, anyway, Squeedee?"



"Who's Your Friend?"

Squeedee hopped upon the top rod of the cage and blew three times on the magic whistle hanging from his belt, and out from the doorway on the other side of the mound of dirt there poked a queer little grayish-brown nose.

"Hello, there, Prairie Dog, old fellow," called Squeedee, jumping down beside Doris once more on the outside of the cage. "Come on out and be sociable when you have nice callers."

Up came the furry head of Prairie Dog with his wiggly nose and bright eyes. He spied Squeedee and came hustling out to greet him.

"Well, well, if it isn't my old friend, Squeedee," he chuckled. "Who's your friend?"

"Little Doris," replied Squeedee, politely. "She has never seen a prairie dog before."

"All right, my dear," Mr. Prairie Dog laughed merrily. "Just have a good look. You see, in our wild state, very few folks ever get a glimpse of us."

"Did you live in funny mounds like the one you came from?" Doris asked.

"Indeed, I did," replied Mr. Prairie Dog.

"I live in the very same kind of a house, only out on the prairie we live in great colonies. You'll see our burrows about fifteen feet apart and you'll find a wee path running from each of them to our next-door neighbor's place. It really looks like a little village."

"And you never get lonesome for your friends and relatives?" Doris asked, smoothing his lovely brown fur.

"It would be folly to say I don't miss them," sighed Mr. Prairie Dog, "for I do. But there's one thing here, I never have to fear being dug up by horrid dogs or bad men. I must confess we are a nuisance, for we take up a great space of ground, and sometimes the cattle don't see our holes and fall into them and break their legs.

"This, of course, makes the farmers angry, and they try their best to destroy us, either by poisoning us or by putting dynamite into our holes and blowing up our villages. Here I have none of that fear. I'm treated kindly by every one, so I guess I can stand the lonesomeness all right."

Just then the keeper came up to feed Mr. Prairie Dog, and Doris and Squeedee moved on, after promising to come back and chat again some other day.

FURNITURE IN HOME

By Marian Moore

THIS desk in the photograph is a reproduction of the famous John Hancock desk taken from the home of that patriot and Declaration of Independence signer in Salem, Massachusetts.

It reveals the type of furniture used in the home of the wealthy Colonial residents.

This desk is of the secretary type, but without the glass doors above. The large folding leaf, which forms the top of the desk when it is closed, opens to form the desk top and writing board. Two wooden slides, which operate automatically as the top is lowered, support the open writing board.

FORCING THE CHILD

A SURE WAY TO DO IT HARM

By Wm. A. McKeever,

Well-Known Lecturer and Author and National Authority on Juvenile Problems

BEFORE attempting to teach your baby any simple lesson, be sure that there is an awakening impulse ready to support the instruction.

All true learning is a response to a call from within. This rule applies strictly to babies, to children and to adults.

Not only must you wait for the impulse, the instinct, the desire, or the interest of the young learner; but if you force instruction ahead of these you will make your child morbid, nervous, resentful or otherwise ill balanced.

Suppose you wish to teach your infant to grasp. If there is no impulse yet apparent to do this simple act, the effort is fruitless.

Suppose it is standing alone or walking which you have in mind as an accomplishment for your child. Unless he shows an impulse to lead in the affair, you will probably frighten him, or the bewildering nuisance awakens and manifests its need for exercise. Then you may of impulse, instinct, or desire safely proceed.

COULD HARDLY DO HER WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and rundown and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, could not eat and could not sleep and had no appetite. I did different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."—Mrs. M. Conlan, 3640 S. Marshfield Ave., Chicago, Ill.

It is such letters as these that testify to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude.

For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so prized by women,

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

I was playing golf the other day with Frank Fessbrer, a dean of the advertising profession in New York when a little mound of sand diverted his ball as he tried to trundle it into the hole. As we walked to the next hole, he remarked: "It's curious how a very little thing can change the whole course, not only of a golf ball, but of a man's life."

Then he told me an extremely interesting story about how Herbert Hoover came to undergo the transition from an engineer to a cabinet minister. Briefly, it was this:

When the war broke out in Europe, our London Ambassador's office was overrun with Americans, many of them penniless, to get home and many of them in financial difficulties.

William B. Ladd, whose presidency of the Merchants' Association of New York, was characterized by so much energy and enterprise, was among several Americans business and financial leaders who volunteered to help Ambassador Page to handle the difficult, excited, stranded crowds. A woman's committee was organized in addition to the men's committee, and Mr. Hoover became a member.

One day she remarked that her husband, an engineer, would be glad to render any service he could. He did. Mr. Page, Mr. Breed, Mr. Presbrey and others quickly noted Hoover's extraordinary ability for organization. As the Belgian organization became serious Mr. Hoover was asked to take hold of it.

The result was that he was seriously considered as a presidential candidate at our last election, is now America's Secretary of Commerce, has earned the deepest gratitude of millions of children and poor parents in many lands and enjoys a world-wide reputation as an organizer without a superior.

Underlying the nation-wide movement now under way by utility corporations to induce their employees to become owners of their securities is the thought here mentioned, and did you think that the president of the largest railway in the country has just written every stockholder—there are 120,000 of them—a letter beseeching their support for the road in opposing any State or Federal legislation which would reduce their earnings or restrictions on management?

Seeing that the railways have two or three million employees, besides nearly thirty corporations some ten million and industrial and mining companies fully as many thousands of employees, a growing army would become very great indeed if effectively organized, distributed and directed.

How this whole move is regarded by financial leaders may be gathered by the comment made by James Speyer, the international banker. Mr. Speyer declares that President Rea's action "must be very gratifying to all those wishing to maintain and strengthen railroad credit, which is so essential to the prosperity of the whole country."

"It is very much to be desired that officials entrusted with the management and welfare of other railroad systems and also those in charge of companies that furnish engines, cars and railroad supplies should follow the example of President Rea. Such a consistent educational campaign would soon have the result of stabilizing the stockholders of these corporations for the defence of their legitimate investment, and are long overdue. It is also very popular to propose unnecessary restrictive legislation against the country's railroads.

Now that blocs are becoming fashionable, are we going to have a secretary of agriculture standing in magnitude of its membership that of the farm bloc?

Months ago I expressed the opinion that business should do well I am now inclined to think that they will do well if they hold their own. The tone of the last Federal Reserve replacement rate at New York may prove to have been significant. It is worth watching.

Notable among developments in the retail business of Boston is the growth of the O'Neil, Larkin Company, reflected today by the opening of a new store at Washington and Water streets.

This is the second enlargement demanded by increasing business in three years.

From 1920, when five men, years experienced in selling men's apparel, banded themselves together with an ideal of better service, the success of the business has been assured, but its growth has exceeded all expectations.

The original partners, all of whom are still actively engaged in the business, were William B. Larkin of Roxbury, president; John J. Sawtelle of South Boston, vice-president; James J. Biggio of Dorchester, but originally of the "Old North End," treasurer; Lawrence P. Quigley, now serving his second term as Mayor of Chelsea, secretary; and LeRoy H. Fuller of Brighton.

That standard of service which has resulted in the growth of the organization from a mere handful to nearly a hundred is to be maintained. Those obligations to the customer, which have been so carefully acknowledged and so rigidly observed, will govern the store in the future as in the past. The effort to make every customer a real friend will continue.

The throngs who visit No. 284 Washington street today will be rewarded by the sight of an complete men's apparel shop as can be found in the city—and one in which the atmosphere of friendliness is pleasingly apparent.

The O'Neil Larkin shops employ only skilled workers and are a factor in the campaign to keep New England industries in New England. Contentedly working under the most sanitary conditions, they are producing the best they can create for employers who will accept nothing less than the best, and who give in return the wage and surroundings necessary to American standards.
